where my rendering was uncertain or where I thought they would be helpful for the better understanding of the Chinese Text. In my Introduction to this book, I have stated the problem suggested by the comparative study of the two texts, have summarised the available material on the same and have drawn my conclusions.

In the printed pages of this book, several mistakes have unfortunately crept in. The difficulty of securing in India the right Chinese types and the still greater difficulty of securing compositors properly qualified to handle them, has been responsible for the wrong use of some Chinese characters. The necessary corrections have, as far as possible, been indicated at the end in 'Corrections and Additions'.

This book is not intended to satisfy the need of those scholars who would like to have the Vimuttimagga in its entirety, but the author will consider himself to be amply rewarded if it serves the purpose of giving an incentive to some young scholars for presenting to the world the complete work, in the near future.

I have to thank Prof. Vidhushekhar Bhattacharya, Prof. Beni Madhab Barua and Dr. Bimala Churn Law for having gone through the Introduction of this book and for making several suggestions. I have also to thank Mr. J. C. Sarkhel, Manager, Calcutta Oriental Press, for having taken great pains in the printing of this book.

And lastly, I have to acknowledge my indebtedness to the University of Bombay for the substantial financial help it has granted towards the cost of the publication of this book.

Note: -The references to the Commentary of the Visuddhi. magga are to the edition of the same published in P. G. Mundyne Pitaka Press, 1909, unless otherwise mentioned. references to the synopsis of the Vimuttimagga are indicated merely by the number of pages without putting any word before 'p.' That is to say references like 'p. 5, p. 27,' indicate that the reference is to the synopsis of the Vimuttimagga, which forms the main part of this dissertation. Any remarks or comments by the writer are put in square brackets. The Roman figures in the marginal notes of the synopsis refer to the chapters of the Visuddhimagga and the following Arabic figures show the number of the paragraph. I have not adopted any European or American transliteration-system of the Chinese sounds, but I have generally followed Nanjio in indicating the Chinese sound by its closest equivalent in the Indian sound-system, except in the case of some names which are more easily recognised in their transliterations used by previous writers. I find this more convenient, especially when the Chinese sound represents an originally Indian sound. The letters a, b, c used after the number of pages of the Taisho edition by Takakusu and Watanabe indicate respectively the upper middle and lower sections of the page. The figures after these letters indicate the number of columns beginning from the right.

INTRODUCTION

It is nearly eighteen years since Prof. M. Nagai of the Imperial University, Tokyo, Japan. pointedly brought to the notice of Buddhist scholars the existence, in the Chinese Buddhist literature, of a book called Ciê-t'o-tāo-lun, 解脫道論. or Vimuttimagga as he rendered it in Pāli.¹ This book is the same as is numbered 1293 in Bunyiu Nanjio's catalogue of the Chinese Translation of the Buddhist Tripiṭaka,² although Nanjio gives 'Vimoksha-mārga-śāstra' as the Sanskrit rendering of the Chinese title. Nanjio further tells us that this book was composed by the Arhat Upatishya or Sāriputra² and was translated into Chinese by Seng-chie-po-lo 僧伽波羅 in 505 A.D.⁴ in the Liān dynasty (A.D. 502-557). This book is divided into twelve chapters in twelve fasciculi or Chinese books.

Vimuttimagga and its Chinese translation.

Nanjio gives us no information about Upatisya, or Upatissa as we may say in Pāli; but he gives us some information about Seng-chie-po-lo.<sup>5</sup> The name Seng-chie-po-lo, or, San-chie-pho-lo as Nanjio transliterates it, is explained in the Biography of the Buddhist worthy monks as Chun-yān 秦 養 community-nourishment (Sangha-bhara) or Seng-khai 僧 @ (Sangha-varman) community-armour. These translations help us to restore the name Seng-chie-po-lo to Sangha-bhara or Sangha-varman, but the Chinese po-lo may also be rendered as pala and so it is not unlikely that the name was Sangha-pala as Prof. Nagai restores it. Sangha-pāla was a samana from Fu-nān or Bu-nān (抹南) Siam or Cambodia. He went to China and there translated some ten or eleven works. While he was in China, he became the disciple<sup>2</sup> of an Indian monk named Gunabhadra (Kiu-nā-phutho),3 who himself came to China in 435 A.D. and was working on translations till 443 A.D. We further learn from Bunviu Nanjio's catalogue that this Gunabhadra was a noted scholar of the Mahayana school. We are also told there (pp. 415-416) that "he was a śramana of Central India, a Brahman by caste and nicknamed the Mahāyāna on account of being well acquainted with the doctrine of Mahāyāna." On his way to China Gunabhadra visited Sīhala-dīpa (Ceylon).4 If we look at the list of books translated by him, we find along with several Mahāyāna works, two books of the Hīnayāna school, Samyuktāgama Sūtra and Abhidharmaprakaraņapāda. This shows that Gunabhadra was also interested in Hīnayāna. He worked on translations till 443 A.D. and died in 468 A.D. in his seventy-fifth year. We learn from Nanjio that San-chie-pho-lo or Sangha-pāla worked on his translations from 505-520 A.D. and died in the year 520 while he was in his sixty-fifth year.<sup>5</sup> The Biography of the Buddhist Worthy Monks referred to above tells us that Sanghapāla was a very brilliant and highly precocious boy. As soon as he came of age to begin his study, he left the worldly life and specialized himself in the study of the Abhidhamma. Having heard the name of the country of China as famous for the study of the Dhamma, he took a boat and went to that country. We have here no information as to who brought Upatissa's Vimuttimagga to China. But judging from the fact that Sanghapāla was quite young when he came to China and from the fact that Gunabhadra, on his way to China, visited Ceylon, it seems not unlikely that the work was brought to China by Gunabhadra when he went to that country in 435 A.D.

This book Vimuttimagga of Upatissa bears such a close similarity, as will be seen from the synopsis of the book, with Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga that we cannot explain it as merely a matter of accident. Now, Buddhaghosa, who came to Ceylon and composed the Visuddhimagga and at least the Commentaries on the Four Nikāyas, was a contemporary of King Mahānāma who was crowned in Ceylon in or about 413 A.D.<sup>1</sup>

Vimuttimagga similar to Visuddhimagga.

Ceylonese tradition assigns the arrival of Buddhaghosa in Ceylon to the year 965<sup>2</sup> after the death of the Buddha. According to the Ceylonese tradition's the Buddha died in 543 B.C. That gives us 422 A.D. as the date of Buddhaghosa's arrival in Ceylor. Visuddhimagga was the first work of Buddhaghosa after his arrival in Ceylon. It was this book that proved his ability to undertake the larger work of re-translating the Sinhalese Atthakathas into the Magadhi language. So it seems very probable that by the time Gunabhadra came to Ceylon, Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga was also well-known.

Now here is a problem. Upatissa's Vimuttimagga, as we have it now in its Chinese translation, bears a very close resemblance to Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga. It cannot be a matter of mere coincidence. It will have to be accounted for in one or the other of the following ways:-

That Buddhaghosa had Upatissa's Vimuttimagga before him, that he took the framework of Upatissa's Vimuttimagga possible and amplified it with his sholastic erudition.

- (2) That Upatissa had Buddhaghosa's book before him and that he abridged it by cutting down several chapters and at the same time introduced several modifications in consistency with the doctrines and views of the school to which he belonged.
- (3) That both these books go to some old common source like the Atthakathās upon which both of them draw, each treating and interpreting the same old material in consistency with the doctrines and views of the school of each.

Still another possibility is suggested.

(4) That the main part of Upatissa's Vimuttimagga might have been composed before Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga, and that some portions might have been added to this book by Sanghapāla who translated the book into Chinese under the influence of the Mahāyāna school.¹

Let us see if we can find any justification for any of these theories or whether we can arrive at any decisive conclusion at all.

Prof. Nagai's views.

Prof. M. Nagai seems to hold the view given as 4 above.2 He identifies Upatissa, the author of the Vimuttimagga, with one Upatissa who is mentioned in the list of the great Theras who handed down the Vinayapitaka from the time when Mahinda came to Ceylon.3 He points out that Pāli Samantapāsādikā, as well as its Chinese translation by Sanghabhadra in 488 A.D., gives an anecdote of Upatissa and his two disciples, Mahāsumma and Mahāpaduma, showing that Upatissa as a teacher of the Vinaya was held in high esteem. He gives another anecdote which tells us how Mahāpaduma cured the queen, wife of King Vasabha, of an illness. This King Vasabha was crowned, according to Wijesinha, in 66 A.D.4 So, Prof. Nagai concludes that this Upatissa, who is mentioned in the list of the Theras that handed down the Vinaya, who was held in great respect by the Sangha and who was a contemporary of King Vasabha [who was crowned in 66 A.D.], is the author of the Vimuttimagga, and that Buddhaghosa had probably this book before him when he wrote the Visuddhimagga.

- 1. J.P.T.S. 1917-19, p. 79.
- 2. J.P.T.S. 1917-19, pp. 71, 78, 79.
- 3. Sed Vin. v. 3.
- 4. J.P.T.S. 1917-19, pp. 73, 74; Mal. (p. 49) gives the period of Vasabha's reign as 65-109 A.D. approximately.

Here, however, we do not find any other proof adduced by Prof. Nagai to identify him with the author of the Vimuttimagga. His main reliance is on the fact that there happens to be one Upatissa mentioned in the list of the Theras who handed down the Vinaya and about whom the Samantapāsādikā in its Pāli as well as Chinese version gives some anecdotes.

Dr. Malalasekara, having considered this opinion of Prof. Nagai, suggests1 that there is no reason to conclude that the Visuddhimagga is a revised version of the Vimuttimagga, as Prof. Nagai suggests. "If we suppose," says he, "that the Vimuttimagga was the result of books brought by Gunabhadra of Mid-India, from his travels in Ceylon and other Hinayana countries, the solution of the problem seems clear. authors drew their inspiration from the same source." suggests that although Buddhaghosa came to Ceylon to study the Sinhalese Atthakathās which were genuine, there might still have been some Commentaries in India, which were studied in that country with traditional interpretation handed down through centuries. "If then it is assumed," concludes Dr. Malalasekara, "that the Vimuttimagga found its way into China by way of some of the schools which flourished in India at that time, and which studied the Canon in the more or less traditional method, it would not be difficult to conclude that the Visuddhimagga and the Vimuttimagga are more or less independent works written by men belonging to much the same school of thought-the Theravada." This view coincides with the third of the probable theories that we suggested above.

Dr. Malala sekara's view.

These conflicting views on the subject of the inter-relation between Upatissa's Vimuttimagga and Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga prompted me to make a comparative study of both these texts and I intend in the following pages to submit the results of my study on this subject.

We shall have to decide this question of the inter-relation between these two texts after thoroughly investigating the evidence, internal and external, that is available to us.

Let us first see what internal evidence we can get from the comparative study of both these books which form the main part of this dissertation. We shall, of course, go into more details of the Vimuttimagga than those of the Visuddhimagga, as the former is much less known than the latter.

General account of the Vim.

The Vimuttimagga is divided into twelve chapters in twelve fasciculi or Chinese books. The division of the books seems to be based on no other principle but the convenience of the size of each book, while the division of the chapters is more systematic, being based on the proper division of the subject matter.

The first chapter is merely introductory in which Upatissa, the author of the Vimuttimagga, takes up the following stanza:

Sīlam samādhi paññā ca vimutti ca anuttarā anubuddhā ime dhammā Gotamena yasassinā.

as the basis for his whole work. In the introductory chapter, he comments on this stanza and says why he must show the Way to Deliverance (vimutti). In the second chapter, Upatissa gives the classification of Sila, conduct. In the third chapter, he discusses the various kinds of practices of purification (dhutas). In the fourth, he gives the classification of concentration (samādhi). In the fifth chapter called 'Search for the Best Friend' (Kalyāṇa-matta-pariyesanā), Upatissa discusses the qualities of the best friend and tells us the ways and means to find out such a friend. The sixth chapter is devoted to the discussion of the different types of character or disposition (cariyā). The seventh chapter enumerates the various devices or helpful means (kammatthānāni) to attain the concentration and further shows how they can be thoroughly understood. eighth chapter is the longest chapter and is divided into five parts. This whole chapter shows in a detailed manner how all those devices (or kammatthānāni) could be used to induce concentration. The ninth chapter treats of the five miraculous powers which one attains as a consequence of mastery over the various practices of concentration. The tenth chapter gives the classification of insight  $(pa\tilde{n}\tilde{a})$ . The eleventh chapter, divided into two parts, gives a detailed treatment of the five means  $(up\bar{a}y\bar{a})$ , insight into which helps one to be free from darkness of ignorance and helps one to cut off craving and to attain noble wisdom (ariyā paññā). The twelfth chapter, also divided into two parts, treats of penetration into the Truths by means of Purities (visuddhiyo) and Insights (ñāṇa), by accomplishing which one reaches the Fruit of holy life culminating in Arhatship.

Thus it will be seen that all these chapters contain an exposition of the topics mentioned in the introductory stanza, namely, conduct  $(s\bar{\imath}la)$ , concentration  $(sam\bar{a}dhi)$ , insight  $(pa\hat{n}\tilde{n}a)$  and deliverance (vimutti). The following table shows the correspondence of the chapters of the Vimutti-magga with those of the Visuddhi-magga:—

This is only a rough correspondence between the different chapters of the two books, some chapters, especially the last three or four, of the Visuddhimagga being inextricably mixed up in the two parts of the twelfth chapter of the Vimuttimagga.

This brief resumé of the contents of the two books at once reveals the fact that there is more than superficial agreement between these two books. Let us go into more details.

It is a well-known fact that in the Visuddhimagga, Buddhaghosa very often refers to, or quotes from, older authorities which he specifically names, such as the Vibhanga, the Paṭisambhidā, the Niddesa, the Peṭaka, the Aṭṭhakathās on the Nikāyas, or alludes to by some general name like Pāli, Porāṇas Pubbācariyas, or Aṭṭhakathās. Sometimes, he merely says, 'So it has been said (vuttam h'etam)', without giving any indication as to what source he refers to. Now it is remarkable to note that there are many correspondences between the several passages in the two books that are due to these common sources of the texts from Pāli, or from the Porāṇas, Pubbācariyas or from the Aṭṭhakathās. We find several passages which are found in both the texts in identical, or almost identical words and attention is drawn to these, from time to time, in the main part of this dissertation. We shall indicate here only a few outstanding cases.

Common sources.

(i) Passages from the Pāli Texts.

Passages from the

Among the Pali texts, the first four Nikayas, the Vibhanga and Pali. Patisambhidāmagga are the texts on which both Upatissa and Buddhaghosa mostly draw. The passages, for instance, taken as texts by Upatissa for the exposition of the trances or anussatis (except that of Upasama), or iddhis, or nirodha-samāpatthi are the same as those given by Buddhaghosa; for they all avowedly go to one and the same common source. The explanation of ācāra-gocara in the second chapter of the Vimuttimagga (p. 11) is the same as that in Buddhaghosa; for, both of them draw upon the Vibhanga. The explanation of iddhis (p. 86) goes back to the common source of the Patisambhida. The explanation of some of the questions regarding Nirodha-samāpatti (p. 128) is based on the Culavedalla-sutta (no. 44 of the Majjhimanikaya). passage taken for the exposition of anapanasati and its advantages (p. 69) are taken by both the authors from S.v. 322, and M. iii. 82 respectively.

In addition to these, there are scores of passages, too numerous to be mentioned here, taken from the Pāli texts quoted by both the authors, as authorities or illustrations of a point under discussion. In some cases Buddhaghosa merely alludes to a passage by giving the introductory words or by giving the name of a sutta, while Upatissa gives the same passage in full. For instance, while explaining the disadvantages or dangers of worldly pleasures (kāmesu ādīnavā) Buddhaghosa merely refers to the passage in the Majjhimanikāya, sutta 22, beginning with appassādā kāmā, while Upatissa gives, in full, the passage (p. 44) including the similes of a skeleton of bones, a piece of flesh, a torch of grass or reed, a dream, a fruit, or a thing begged and so on. In another place, Buddhaghosa merely refers, for the explanation of vijjā and carana, to the Ambattha and the

Bhayabherava¹ suttas, while Upatissa gives the full explanation as given in these suttas.²

Poranas.

(ii) Porāņas.

There are several passages quoted by Buddhaghosa from Porāṇas and some of these passages are found in Upatissa's Vimuttimagga in almost similar words. For instance, a number of the verses at the end of chapter XVIII of the Visuddhimagga, about the inter-dependence of 'name' and 'form' are found in the Vimuttimagga' in almost similar words, the variations being noted in the detailed synopsis of the Vimuttimagga. Likewise, the similes of a lamp  $(pad\bar{\imath}pa)$ , the sun (suriya) and a boat  $(n\bar{a}v\bar{a})$  given in the Visuddhimagga XXII. 92, 95, 96 are found in the Vimuttimagga in identical words.

Pubbācariyas

(iii) Pubbācariyas.

The passage explaining the arising of the different consciousnesses of the eye, ear, nose, etc. ascribed by Buddhaghosa in XV. 39 to Pubbācariyas (Former Teachers), is found in the Vimuttimagga<sup>5</sup> in a slightly varied but fuller form.

Upatissa refers several passages to former teachers and some of these are found with slight variations in Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga although Buddhaghosa does not make mention of any former teachers in that connection. For instance. Upatissa says (7.3a.3) that former teachers have mentioned four ways of cultivating anapanasati, which he gives as ganana, anubandhanā, thapanā, and sallakkhanā, while Buddhaghosa in VIII. 189, gives these four ways, and in addition four more without saying anything about former teachers. While treating of the Catudhātuvavatthāna, Upatissa says (8.15.1) that former teachers have given ten' ways in which this vavatthana can be done, whereas Buddhaghosa speaks in XI. 86 of thirteen ways without speaking of any former teachers. In his treatment of divine ear (dibbasota), Upatissa speaks of the way, according to some teachers, of developing the power of divine hearing and says that the yogāvacara begins first with giving his attention to the sounds of worms residing within his body.8 Buddhaghosa speaks in XIII. 3, without any mention of former teachers, of the sounds of these worms residing within one's body.

(iv) Atthakathās.

Attha-

There are some passages quoted from the Atthakathas by kathas. Buddhaghosa. For instance, in the chapter on the Asubhanimitta, he quotes a very long passage (VI. 19-22), showing in a detailed manner how the yogāvacara should go to a place where he can find the asubhanimitta. This whole passage is found in the Vimuttimagga<sup>1</sup> (6.3a.2-6.5a.3) with a slight variation consisting of the omission of the repeated phrases. Similarly, while speaking of the first four kasinas, the kasinas of the Earth, Water, Fire and Wind, both the authors seem to be referring to the same Atthakathas: for we find correspondence in their treatment even to the details. In the quotation given by Buddhaghosa IV. 22. we have a reference to the size of the nimitta, suppamattam vā sarāvamattam vā, as big as 'a winnowing-basket or a waterbowl.' Exactly the same idea, expressed in identical words, is found in the Vimuttimagga.2 Similarly, in the treatment of the kasina of Wind, Buddhaghosa gives a quotation from the Atthakathās, where we find a mention of the top of a sugar-cane, or of a bamboo (V.9). We find the same mention in the Vimuttimagga. The remarks by both the authors about the natural and artificial kasina in the case of the first four kasinas agree and we may explain this as due to the same common source of the Atthakathās.

(v) In the Visuddhimagga IV.86, Buddhaghosa gives passage from the Petaka showing how the five factors of a trance are the opposites of the five hindrances (nivaranani). the Vimuttimagga (4.17.1), we find exactly the same quotation ascribed by Upatissa to a book called Sān Tsāng = 藏.

A quotation from the Petaka

(vi) In the Visuddhimagga XIV.48, Buddhaghosa gives the following verse ascribed to Sāriputta, where we are told of the size of the sensitive part (pasada) of the eye:

A common verse

Yena cakkhappasādena rūpāni manupassati parittam sukhumam etam ūkāsirasamūpamam.

Now in the Vimuttimagga<sup>5</sup> (10.2.1), we have the same verse in almost identical words. Instead of ūkāsira, Upatissa, as far as can be seen from this Chinese translation, uses the word  $\bar{u}k\bar{a}$ only.

2. p. 44 3. p. 58.

5. p. 96.

<sup>4.</sup> p. 49; the same passage is quoted in DhsCm. p. 165 and Dhammapala in his commentary on the Visuddhimagga refers to Petaka at least three times (pp. 153, 194, 874) almost in a similar context.

Some unidentified source. (vii) Over and above these cases, where the common source of the parallel passages can be definitely ascertained, there are others where the similarity is distinctly seen, although the common source may not be known. For instance, in the chapter on the 'Search for the Best Friend' (Kalyāṇa-mitta-pariyesanā), Upatissa mentions the seven qualities of the best friend which are identical with those given by Buddhaghosa in the verse III.61. Likewise, the comment on the word sikkhati, as given by Upatissa, is word for word the same as is found in the Visuddhimagga VIII.173. So also, the comment on the word anubandhanā in the Visuddhimagga VIII.196 is the same as Upatissa's comment on the same word. Upatissa also gives a passage which corresponds to Buddhaghosa's four nayas, ekattanaya, nānattanaya, abyāpāranaya, evamdhammatānaya given by Buddhaghosa in XVII.309-313 and XX.102.

Similes, metaphors, illustrations.

We also find several similes and metaphors which are common to both of our texts, either because they are taken from a common source or because one has borrowed from the other. The parable of a mountain-cow (gāvī pabbateyyā) in the Visuddhimagga IV.130, taken from an older i (A.iv.418-19), is given by Upatissa. The simile of a young calf (dhenupaka vaccha) given by Buddhaghosa in IV.174 is also given by Upatissa. The simile of a saw (kakaca) used for cutting wood, given by Buddhaghosa in VIII.201-203 to illustrate how attention is to be directed to the wind of breath as it comes in and goes out, is found in the Vimuttimagga.8 The simile of the same as given in the Kakacupama sutta (No. 21 of Majjhimanikāya) is given by Upatissa in another place to illustrate how one should see the disadvantages in ill-will. This corresponds to Buddhaghosa's mention of the same in IX.15. The similes of a drum and sound 10 (B.XVIII.6.), a lame man and a blind man11 (B.XVIII.35.), flash of lightning and a city of Gandharvas12 (B.XX.104.) are found in the Vimuttimagga. The Mahābhūtas are compared by Upatissa to three sticks reclining upon one another.13 This corresponds to Buddhaghosa's simile in another context where he shows the inter-dependence of nāma and rūpa thus: yathā hi dvīsu naļakalāpisu añnamnnam nissāya thapitāsu in XVIII.32. Upatissa in 11.14.10 gives a simile 'like a man who takes water from some one place in the ocean, tastes it with his tongue and knows all the water in the ocean to be salty'. This corresponds to Buddhaghosa's eka-jalabindumhi sakala-samudda-jalarasam viya, 'as the taste of all water in the ocean is in one drop of water from it' (XVI. 60). used in a different context. Even the illustration of devānam devāyatanam iva, given by Buddhaghosa in X.24.31 while explaining the meaning of the word ayatana, is found in the Vimuttimagga.3 The similes of the continuous flame3 of a lamp, a moth<sup>4</sup> falling into a lamp, or the flame of a lamp' in a quiet place,5 which are very common in Buddhist literature, are given by both Buddhaghosa and Upatissa. Upatissa, like Buddhaghosa, gives the similes of the striking of a bell and the fluttering of wings by a bird to illustrate vitakka, and the similes of the merging sound and the wheeling round of a bird to illustrate vicāra.6

There are several other similes which are peculiar to Upatissa. He has given some protracted similes. For instance, there is a beautiful long-protracted simile of a king who is asleep, who hears the sound of a knock on the door, wakes up, instructs a servant to have the door opened, sees his gardener coming with a mango-fruit, eats the mango-fruit which the queen cuts and gives to him, gives his judgment about the fruit and goes back to sleep again. This simile is given to illustrate the whole process of thought when an object is seen through the sense-aperture of the eye. Another protracted simile given by Upatissa to illustrate the inter-relation of the different factors of Dependent Origination (paticca-samuppāda), and to show that the round of birth and death is without a beginning and without an end, is that of a seed and the rice-plant.

Upatissa illustrates the distinction between upacāra and appanā by some beautiful similes. Upacāra is like a boat on water full of waves; appanā like a boat on water where there is no wind. Upacāra is like a young boy, appanā like a strong man. Upacāra is like a blind man, appanā like one who is not blind. Upacāra is like a man who recites suttas only after a long time and so forgets; appanā is like one who recites suttas constantly and so does not forget (4.7.8.-4.7a. 4). This simile of the recitation of the suttas seems to be a favourite one with Upatissa. He compares vitakka to a man who recites suttas in his mind, while vicāra is compared to one who meditates over the meaning of a sutta<sup>1</sup> (4.12a.10-4.13.1).

The distinction between gotrabhū-ñāna and maggāñāna is illustrated in this way. The former is like a man who has only one foot outside the threshold of a burning city, while the latter is like one who has put both his feet outside the city.2 There is a most apt simile given by Upatissa to illustrate the cultivation of equanimity  $(upekkh\bar{a})$  after the cultivation of friendliness (mettā), compassion (karunā) and rejoicing or delight (muditā). Just as a man when he sees his relative coming back. after a long absence in a far-off country, pays attention to him for some time, but, later on, as time passes by, he becomes indifferent to him'.3 There is another very appropriate simile to illustrate the behaviour of a yogāvacara with his master. 'Like a newly married bride going to wait upon her father-in-law and mother-in-law, the yogāvacara should have a sense of conscientiousness (hiri) and fear (ottappa), and should receive instructions from his master.'4 Upatissa shows the appropriateness of the order of the Four Noble Truths by illustrating them with the simile of a physician who first sees the symptoms of a disease, hears the cause of it and then seeing the possibility of a cure, prescribes a suitable medicine for the cure of the disease.<sup>5</sup> The impurities of the body oozing out through its nine openings are compared to wine placed in a leaking pot<sup>6</sup> (8.22a.1). The simile of an iron ball red-hot with fire, that could be moulded into whatever thing one likes, is given by Upatissa (9.6a.5). With this may be contrasted the similes of a goldsmith and of a potter preparing, respectively, whatever ornaments and pots they like from the red-hot gold and wellkneaded earth (B.XII.2). To illustrate the unknown destiny of an Arhat, Upatissa gives the simile of red-hot iron beaten and giving out sparks. When it is dipped into water we do not know where the sparks disappear; so we do not know anything about the destiny of an Arhat.1 The simile of one who is afraid of a poisonous serpent is given by Upatissa in 5.17.7-8. One who wants to be free from upādānakkhandhas is compared to a man who wants to get rid of a poisonous serpent whom he has grasped unawares.2 The simile of an elephant and a goad is often given by Upatissa. For instance, he says, one must apply oneself to a samādhi-nimitta for controlling oneself, just as a goad is applied to an elephant for controlling him.3 To express harmfulness of a thing, Upatissa gives the similes of riding an elephant without a goad,4 or of a man who, having a natural excess of the humor of phlegm, eats fatty things or one who. having a natural excess of bile in his humors, takes hot drinks.6 Upatissa gives another very beautiful and most appropriate simile. The four Great Elements (mahābhūtāni) are compared to three sticks reclining upon one another and the Derived Elements' (upādā rūpāni) are compared to the shadows of the three sticks. Like the three sticks, the Great Elements, depend upon one another, but the Derived Elements, although they are derived from the Great Elements, do not depend upon one another, like the shadows of the sticks.7

There are also some similes which Upatissa gives from some older sources. For instance, to illustrate the first four trances of the realm of form, Upatissa gives the similes from M.i.276, 277-78. Buddhaghosa does not give these similes. Similarly the similes of a cart and an army (p. 48) are quite usual similes in Buddhist literature. Upatissa uses both of them in 4.16.8-10. "Just as, because of the different parts of the cart we can use the word cart, or because of the division of the army we can say an army, so this trance (jhāna) is so called because of the different factors (angāni)." Upatissa also gives very appropriate similes to illustrate the meaning of the different sankhāras. Touch (phassa) is like the light of the sun that strikes the wall, equanimity (upekkhā) like a man holding a scale of balance, false view (ditthi) like a blind man touching and feeling an elephant, shamelessness like a candāla.\(^{13}\) At another place, 'not to delight in good things' is illustrated by the simile of a candāla who cares not for a princely throne.

Points of dis-similarity. Having noticed the points of similarity between our two texts, let us now proceed to examine the points of dis-similarity. The differences between the two texts are of two kinds: (A) in the doctrinal points and (B) in the method of treatment.

- (A) At the outset it may be borne in mind that Upatissa does not at all differ from Buddhaghosa on any fundamental doctrines of Buddhism. This clearly shows that both of them accept the same Theravāda tradition. It is only on comparatively minor points that they differ.
- (i) For instance, Upatissa gives thirty-eight kammatthānas as the principal ones and he mentions two others as only secondary.<sup>2</sup> His whole treatment of the kammatthānas is based on the acceptance of thirty-eight kammatthānas, mentioning occasionally the other two. In the detailed treatment of these kammatthānas, however, he has included these two also. This subject is discussed in a note in the main body of this dissertation<sup>3</sup> and it will be seen from it that this classification of Upatissa is based upon an older classification as seen in M.ii.14-15, and Ps. i. 6. Netti and Abhidharmakośa of Vasubandhu (VIII.36a) also give the same kasiņas as are given here.
- (ii) Upatissa speaks of the kasina-mandala as a circular, triangular or quadrilateral, although he adds at the same time that former teachers considered a circular mandala as the best. Buddhaghosa does not make any mention of the triangular or quadrilateral kasina.
- (iii) In connection with the nimitta of the Brahmavihāras, Upatissa speaks of the extension of the nimitta of the Brahmavihāras as well as of the ten kasiṇas. Buddhaghosa is definitely opposed to this view. He speaks against this view and it is quite obvious that he has in mind some definite theorists who held this view. Can it not be that Buddhaghosa has this passage of Upatissa or this view of the school of Upatissa in mind?
- (iv) Upatissa speaks of and accepts fourteen cariyas,6 or types of disposition, while Buddhaghosa, although he is aware of this fourteen-fold classification, accepts only six cariyās. He definitely rejects the fourteen-fold classification (B. III. 74). He devotes a lot of space to the discussion of these cariyās and we shall have an occasion to refer to them again.

(v) Upatissa gives thirty kinds of rupas,2 four being the mahābhūtās, the great elements, and twenty-six upādārūpās. derived-matter. Buddhaghosa, gives only twenty-eight (XIV.36). He is aware of some other kinds of rupas, which are added by some to his list. He discusses those rupas and rejects all of them. In this connection, among other rupas, he mentions jātirūpa and adds: 'according to some (ekaccānam matena, XIV.71), middharūpa'. Upatissa seems to accept these two rūpas. He has a very consistent view about this middha-rūpa, the material form or quality of sloth. He refers to middharūpa on three other occasions. In 4.15.4-4.15a.1 and in 10.3a.2-3, Upatissa says that middha-rūpa is of three kinds—that which is produced by weather (utuja), produced from mind (cittaja), and produced from food (āhāraja). Upatissa says that it is the cittaja-middha that is a hindrance (nīvaraṇa) and not the other two; for, they can be even in an Arhat. He gives a quotation<sup>3</sup> from Anuruddha to explain that cittaja middha is to be given up at the time of Arhatship, while the other two can be given up later. In 12,13.10, Upatissa mentions only thina (mental languor) and uddhacca (restlessness) as things that are given up at the time of entrance into the Path of Arhatship.4 while Buddhaghosa mentions thina-middha5 and udhacca in the same connection (XXII.71).

This view of Upatissa is supported by the author of the Milinda-pañha. In this book, we find the mention of ten kinds of physical states (kāyānugatā dhammā) over which an Arhat has no control. Among these ten, we find middha.

(vi) Buddhaghosa speaks of the five angas or factors of the first trance, three of the second, and two each of the third and fourth (IV.106,139,153,183). The factors of each trance are as follows:—

1st trance, 5 angas: vitakka, vicāra, pīti, sukha and ekaggatā.
2nd trance, 3 angas: pīti, sukha and ekaggatā.
3rd trance, 2 angas: sukha and ekaggatā.
4th trance, 2 angas: upekkhā and ekaggatā.

ment of the foetus week by week. A comparison with Atharvaveda as well as with some of the old Indian medical works like Vāgbhat's Aṣtānga-hṛdaya,¹ and Caraka² and Suśruta³ shows that the names of the worms given by Upatissa are different from those mentioned in these works. Suśruta speaks of the development of foetus month by month and not week by week.⁴ Upatissa's exposition of the Law of Dependent Origination is quite simple and is illustrated by the simile of the rice-seed and rice-plant.⁵

(iii) We find from the comparison of these two texts that where Upatissa is brief, Buddhaghosa is prolix and where Upatissa goes into details Buddhaghosa does not. For instance, while explaining the word atthana, Upatissa mentions only six atthanas which correspond to Buddhaghosa's palibodhas that are given by him as ten (III.109). We have already mentioned above7 another case where Buddhaghosa gives eight ways of cultivating mindfulness of breath (VIII.189) while Upatissa gives only four.8 Upatissa mentions only four advantages of cultivating samādhi, while Buddhaghosa mentions (XI.120-24). We have also referred to (p. xxiv) another case where Upatissa mentions only ten ways, given by former teachers, of catudhātuvavatthāna,10 while Buddhaghosa gives thirteen. Upatissa gives only three divisions of sīla: duvidha, tividha, catubbidha (pp. 7-14). He does not speak of the pañcavidha class which Buddhaghosa gives. Upatissa does not speak of the five kinds mastery (vasiyo, p. 51) that Buddhaghosa gives in IV.151.

On the other hand Upatissa gives a detailed explanation of various kinds of  $viveka^{11}$  and the five kinds of vimutti, while Buddhaghosa does not. Upatissa gives six kinds of  $p\bar{\imath}ti$ , while Buddhaghosa gives only five (IV.94-100). Upatissa gives five kinds of sukha, whereas Buddhaghosa does not speak of anything of the kind. In the classification of  $s\bar{\imath}la$ ,  $sam\bar{a}dhi$  and  $pa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}a$ , Upatissa gives several divisions which are not given by Buddhaghosa and many of them are based upon some older texts like Vibhanga. Upatissa gives a detailed list of the special distinctions of the Buddha while Buddhaghosa merely refers to them (IX.124). Upatissa gives a detailed statement of the disadvantages of ill-will, while Buddhaghosa only alludes to some suttas (IX.2).

(iv) Upatissa sometimes introduces new matter which we do not find in the corresponding portion of Buddhaghosa. For instance, Upatissa mentions several guṇas³ of each trance, twenty-five of the first, twenty-three of the second, twenty-two of the third and fourth trances and of the four formless (arūpāvacara) samādhis. Buddhaghosa does not say anything of the kind. Similarly, as a reward for each of these trances and samādhis, Upatissa names the planes of the different kinds of gods (together with their life-periods)⁴ where the yogāvacara is born. It is interesting to note that the life-periods assigned to these different gods by Upatissa do not agree in all cases with those given in Vibhanga (424-26), or Abhidhammatthasangaha (chap. V. para. 6).⁵ The following comparative list will be interesting:—

While explaining the anussatis, Upatissa explains or defines the subject of each of the anussatis. In his explanation of the word Dhamma in Dhammānussati, Upatissa gives a very interesting comment. He explains the word Dhamma as Nibbāna and the Way to Nibbāna. His explanation of Nibbāna is the cessation of all activities (sankhārā), abandoment of all defilements, cessation of craving, dispassionateness and calmness. The way to Nibbāna, he explains, in terms of those dhammas which are known as the Thirty-seven Factors of Enlightenment (bodhipakkhiya-dhammā). Compare with this Buddhaghosa's idea of Nibbāna in XVI.64-74.

Having noticed the points of similarity and dissimilarity, let us further see whether there is any direct or veiled reference in one book to the other, or whether there is any other evidence to make one believe in the probability of the author of one book having known the other.

It has been noted that Buddhaghosa, in his Visuddhimagga, often refers to the views of other philosophical systems or schools or traditions—to the views of the Sānkhya<sup>3</sup> and Vaiśeṣika<sup>4</sup> systems, of those whom he calls Believers in God or (Supreme) Controller,¹ of the Jainas,² as well as to the views of other schools or traditions (in Buddhism).³ He does not mention them by their specific name but uses some word that is peculilarly characteristic of each of them or simply uses words like 'eke. ekacce, keci, aññe, apare, or yo pana vadeyya, etc.' leaving it to the reader to imagine whom the cap fits. For our purpose, we are to confine ourselves to Buddhaghosa's references to other schools within the pale of Buddhism. Upatissa also often gives the views of other schools,⁴ introducing them simply with a remark such as 'and it is said', 'further it is said.' Such references to the views of other schools made by Buddhaghosa and Upatissa in their books, we shall classify in the following way:

- (A) Those views that have been referred to by Buddhaghosa as well as by Upatissa.
- (B) Those views that have been ascribed to 'some' by one author and found to be exactly tallying with the views held by the other.

It is well-known that Buddhaghosa belonged to the school of the Theravādins and accepted the tradition of the Mahāvihāra school in Ceylon. In his prefatory remarks to the Visuddhimagga, Buddhaghosa definitely says that he would give the exposition of the Path of Purity, according to the traditional interpretation of those who belong to the Mahāvihāra (I.4).

- (A) (i) In the Visuddhimagga, I.19, while giving the various interpretations of the word  $s\bar{\imath}la$ , Buddhaghosa says that there are others who interpret the word  $s\bar{\imath}la$ , also in the sense of 'head' (sira) or in the sense of 'cool' ( $s\bar{\imath}tala$ ). These same interpretations as well as a few others are given by Upatissa in 1.6.3-10.5
- (ii) In the Visuddhimagga III.78, Buddhaghosa says that there are others who would make three other cariyās—by way of craving,  $(tanh\bar{a})$ , egoism  $(m\bar{a}na)$  and false belief (ditthi). Upatissa also refers to this view as an alternative to his view, but he remarks that these three are included in his fourteen, as they are not different in meaning from some of those that are included in his fourteen.1

- (iii) While speaking of the nimitta of the ānāpānasati, Buddhaghosa says in VIII.214, "There are some who say that the nimitta appears to some one, giving a pleasurable contact like that of soft cotton, or cotton-wool, or like a gentle breeze of wind." In the next paragraph, however, Buddhaghosa gives the opinion of the Atthakathās which he apparently accepts. Now, Upatissa gives a passage in which we can trace the expressions used by Buddhaghosa to express both these views.<sup>2</sup>
- (iv) Buddhaghosa refers in IX.112 to the views of some people who believed that all the four appamaññās can have all the four or five trances. Upatissa refers to this same view and quotes<sup>3</sup> the very passage from A. iv. 300 given by Buddhaghosa.
- (v) In the Visuddhimagga XIV.42, Buddhaghosa refers to the views of some regarding the sensitive parts of the five sense-organs. "There are others who say that the eye is the sensitive part in which the element of fire is predominant, the ear, the nose, tongue and the body are the sensitive parts in which the elements of space, wind, water, earth, respectively, predominate." This same view is given in a detailed manner by Upatissa.
- (vi) Like Buddhaghosa, Upatissa also believed in the simultaneous penetration into all the Four Truths. Upatissa refers to the view of those who believed in the attainment of Truths in successive stages (nānābhisamaya) and points out in detail the flaws in this view of theirs. He gives seven flaws,<sup>5</sup> at least two of which can be identified with some of the refutations of this theory, given in the Kathāvatthu i.213, para, 5 ff., 216 para. 10. Buddhaghosa refers to the theorists who held such views and dismisses them by saying that an answer to them has been given in the Kathāvatthu.<sup>6</sup>
- (B) (i) In the Visuddhimagga II. 78, Buddhaghosa refers to a view of some who hold that there is an akusala dhutanga. In II. 79, he also mentions those who think that the dhutanga is 'kusalattikavinimuttam'. Now, Upatissa seems to be holding a view which corresponds to the latter of these views. In the Commentary on the Visuddhimagga, Dhammapāla commenting on the word 'those (yesaṃ)' says that by this word, Buddhaghosa refers to those who lived in the Abhayagiri (Monastery). [Abhayagirivāsike sandhāya āha, p. 96, Burmese edition.]

- (ii) In the Visuddhimagga III.74, Buddhaghosa refers to the views of those who held the belief in fourteen cariyās, instead of six according to his belief. This same view of fourteen cariyās is accepted by Upatissa.<sup>2</sup>
- (iii) There is a very important passage for our purpose in the Visuddhimagga III.80, which read with Dhammapāla's comment, goes a long way to determine the relation between Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga and Upatissa's Vimuttimagga. There, Buddhaghosa says: Tatra, purimā tāva tisso cariyā pubbāciṇṇanidānā, dhātu-dosa-nidānā cā ti ekacce vadanti. "There are some who say that the first three cariyās of these are determined by one's past actions, by [the excess of some of] the four great elements and of the humours." Exactly this same theory is advocated by Upatissa.

Dhammapāla in his Paramattha-mañjūsā, the Commentary on Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga, says, while commenting on the word ekacce (p. 113 Burmese ed.): "Ekacce ti Upatissattheram sandhāyāha. Tena hi Vimuttimagge tathā vuttam." "The word 'some' is used with reference to the Elder Upatissa. He has said so in the Vimuttimagga." This is a very important comment by Dhammapāla for our purpose.

(iv) In continuation of the same passage, Buddhaghosa says in III.81: "They explain that one becomes rāgacarita when there is excess of the humour of phlegm and one becomes mohacarita when there is excess of the humour of wind. Or, that one becomes mohacarita when there is excess of the humour of phlegm and rāgacarita when there is excess of the humour of wind." Buddhaghosa in the next paragraph, III.82, points out a defect in this argument, that this explains only rāga and moha (rāga-moha-dvayameva vuttam). He means that there is no explanation of dosa. And another defect that he points out is that in the alternative explanation, the statement goes just counter to the statement in the first alternative. And so, he brushes aside the argument and concludes 'all this is an indiscriminate statement (sabbametam aparicchinnavacanam).'

<sup>4.</sup> My attention was drawn to this passage by Prof. M. Nagai. He himself was informed of this passage by Nyanatiloka who has published [1931] the first volume of his German translation of the Visuddhimagga. In his introduction to that book, on p. 6, he has quoted this Chinese passage from our Chinese version of the Vimuttimagga. See also 'Pratitya-Samutpāda-śāstra' des Ullangha' von Vasudev Gokhle, [Bonn, 1930] p. 10 foot-note ?

Now it is curious to note that the argument that Upatissa offers is the same that is put in the mouth of these people by Buddhaghosa except that his statement explains not only  $r\bar{a}ga$  and moha but also dosa. To make this point clear, let me reproduce the Pāli rendering of the relevant passage in our. Chinese text: Semhādhiko rāga-carito, pittādhiko dosa-carito, vātādhiko moha-carito. Aparañ ca vuttam: semhādhiko moha-carito, vātādhiko rāga-carito." Here we see that in the first part of this statement all the three, rāga, dosa, moha are mentioned, while it is only in the last part that only two, moha and rāga, are mentioned, and this can be explained by saying that the exchange in the two alternatives is between rāga and moha only, the second term 'dosa' is not mentioned because it remains unaffected.

If we believe in the authoritative statement of Dhammapāla that Buddhaghosa alludes to Upatissa and his Vimuttimagga, does this statement of Buddhaghosa imply that he misunderstood the point of view of his opponent or is it an example of deliberate twisting by Buddhaghosa of his opponent's statement?

- (v) We have already pointed out<sup>2</sup> that Buddhaghosa, while speaking about the extension of the nimitta of the Brahmavihāra says in III.113-114 that it should not be extended. He allows the extension of only the ten kasinas (III.109). Buddhaghosa dwells on this point of extension and shows his reasons why the nimitta of the Brahmavihāra should not be extended. It appears obvious, though he does not definitely say so, that Buddhaghosa has some people in mind, who hold this view. Now, Upatissa says (3.7a. 6-7) that the nimitta of the kasinas and Brahmavihāras may be extended.<sup>3</sup>
- (vi) In the Visuddhimagga IV.114, Buddhaghosa says: Paṭipadāvisuddhi nāma sa-sambhāriko upacāro, upekkhānubrū-hanā nāma appanā, sampahaṃsanā nāma paccavelkhaṇā ti evameke vannayanti". "There are some who interpret the purity of the course as the neighbourhood-trance together with its accompanying things, the cultivation of equanimity as the raptured state of trance, and gladdening as reflection." Buddhaghosa rejects this interpretation on the authority of a passage from the Paṭisambhidā and gives his own interpretation. Now Upatissa accepts exactly this interpretation¹ of those terms and the whole passage as given by him (4.17.10-4.17a.1) is identical in words with the passage quoted above from Buddhaghosa. Dhammapāla here again comes to our rescue. He gives us valuable information. He explains this word eke as Abhayagirivāsino, 'those who lived in the Abhayagiri [monastery].'

(vii) In the detailed enumeration of rūpās, Buddhaghosa gives, as we have already noted (p. xxxi), twenty-eight rūpas (XIV.71). He mentions several other rūpas, which some others would like to include, but he rejects them all, giving his reasons. Among these rūpas, Buddhaghosa mentions jātirūpa and middharūpa. Regarding the last, he says: Ekaccānam matena middharūpam. Both these rūpas Upa. includes in his list, which according to him consists of thirty rūpas. Here also, Dhammapāla is of great help to us. He comments on the word ekaccānam as Abhayagirivāsīnam. Upatissa and his school had a very consistent view about middharūpa and we have already dealt with it above.

(vii) While discussing the phalasamāpatti, Buddhaghosa refers in XXIII.7 to those who believed that the Sotāpannas and Sakadāgāmis cannot have phalasamāpatti, but only those that occupy a higher stage than these (i.e. the Anāgāmis and the Arhats) can have. He also states the reason given by them, that only these last two have reached perfection in samādhi. He rejects their point of view on the ground that even an ordinary man (puthujjana) can attain the state of [perfection in a] lokiya-samādhi, and further, not wishing to bother himself with giving any more reasons, simply says: "Why think of reason or no reason? Has it not been said in the Sacred Texts.....?" He gives a quotation from Ps. i. 68 to support his own view that all ariyas can have phalasamāpatti. Now Upatissa's position (12.6.6) exactly corresponds to the view of these theorists' referred to by Buddhaghosa and he states exactly the same reason put in the mouth of these theorists by Buddhaghosa.

It is curious to note that, immediately after this, Upatissa also makes a reference<sup>2</sup> to those who held that all Ariyas can have phalasamāpatti and states as their authority the same passage from Ps. i. 68 (which Upatissa merely indicates by giving introductory words) on the strength of which Buddhaghosa supports his own view and rejects that of his opponent.

(ix) In the Visuddhimagga XXIII. 11, Buddhaghosa again refers to the views of those who believed that the Sotāpanna, starting penetrative insight with the intention of the attainment of the fruit (phalasamāpatti), becomes Sakadāgāmī, the Sakadāgāmī becomes Anāgāmī. Upatissa's position is exactly the same³ (12.17.5). Here again Dhammapāla is helpful⁴ to us in giving the information that this statement is made with reference to the Abhayagirivādins.

Buddhaghosa continuing his argument points out the difficulty if the position of his opponent is accepted. He says that by accepting the view advocated by his opponents, we will be driven to conclude that an Anāgāmī becomes an Arhat, an Arhat a Paccekabuddha and a Paccekabuddha a Buddha.

Upatissa seems to have anticipated this objection and he answers (12.17.5) that an  $An\bar{a}g\bar{a}m\bar{\epsilon}$ , while starting his penetrative insight for the attainment of the Fruit cannot immediately reach the Path of Arhatship, because he does not produce  $vipassan\bar{a}$  dassana as it is not the thing aimed at by him, and because his reflection is not powerful enough<sup>5</sup> [to enable him to reach the path of Arhatship].

Having studied the internal evidence of our two texts in so far as the similarity and dis-similarity of the ideas and in so far as reference to philosophical views or doctrinal points is concerned, let us now turn our attention to proper names—names, either of books, places, or personages mentioned in the Vimuttimagga.

(i) One cannot fail to notice the names of two or three works referred to by Upatissa. He quotes from San Tsang  $\Xi$  at three different times and one of these quotations exactly agrees, as we have already noticed (p. xxv), with the quotation from the Petaka given by Buddhaghosa in IV.86. The other two quotations I could trace in the Petakopadesa of Mahākaccāna, VIIth Chapter, pp. 157, 158 of Hardy's Manuscript (in Roman characters) preserved in the State Library of Berlin, a photographic copy of which I could secure some years ago. There is an edition of the Petakopadesa' in Burmese characters printed in the Zabu Meit Swe Press, Rangoon, 1917 and the passages in question are found on p. 191 of that edition. At the end of several chapters (iii,v,viii) of the Petakopadesa we read the name of the author Mahākaccāna residing in Jambūvana. Prof. Hardy in his Introduction (pp. x-xvi) to the Netti-Pakarana advances a view on the supposed authority of Dhammapāla's Commentary on Netti, that Petaka is an abbreviated name of the Petakopadesa.

But this does not seem to me to be correct. I think Prof. Hardy has misunderstood the commentary. In the Commentary on the Netti-pakaraṇa, Dhammapāla mentions by name both the works, Peṭaka and Peṭakopadesa, separately. In the Sinhalese edition of this book edited by Widurupola Piyatissathera in the Simon Hewavitaraṇa Bequest Fund Series, vol. IX, Peṭaka is mentioned on p. 1, verse 12, and on p. 3 a quotation is given from the Peṭaka<sup>2</sup>:

Yattha ca sabbe hārā sampatamānā nayanti suttattham byanjanavidhī puthuttā sā bhāmi hāra-sampāto 'ti.

On the other hand, we find the following passages: tathā hi agarahitāya ācariya-paramparāya Petakopadeso<sup>3</sup> viyaNetti-pakaranam ägatam (p. 3). Ayam ca attho Petakopadesena vibhāvetabbo (p. 175). And here are reproduced extracts which can be identified in the available Text of the Petakopadesa.<sup>5</sup> But the quotation ascribed here to Petaka So also, although two of the three quotais not traced. tions referred to above are found in the Petakopadesa, the quotation which is ascribed by Buddhaghosa to Petaka I could not so far trace. Dhammapāla in his Commentary on the Visuddhimagga refers to Petaka, almost in a similar context, no less than three times (pp. 153,194,874). When he mentions it for the first time, he explains it as Mahākaccānattherena desitam Piţakānam samvannanā. Therefore, it seems to be a different work and hence we cannot identify it with Petakopadesa. The Chinese characters used for San-Tsang ordinarily mean Ti-piṭaka but here they may stand for some specific work. Przyluski in his 'Le Concile de Rajagṛha' p. 109 gives these characters and suggests that they may stand for Sam[yukta]-piṭaka. He also mentions Peṭakopadesa on p. 74 of the book. Yamakami in his 'Systems of Buddhistic Thought' mentions (p. 175) Sen-Cwhan, but in the absence of the original Chinese characters it would be hazardous to give its Indian equivalent. Under these circumstances, it would not be safe to identify Sān-tsāng with Peṭakopadesa. Nor can we identify it with Peṭaka until we know more of both of these names, although the possibility of such identification is not precluded.

While speaking of the advantages of Buddhānussati, Upatissa quotes from Shiu-to-lo-Nieh-ti-li-chu 修多羅涅底里句. The quotation says that one who desires to reflect upon the Buddha is worthy to be respected like a place with the image of the Buddha.1 To this Buddhaghosa has a corresponding remark in VIII.67: "Even the body of the man, who is given to the reflection upon the Buddha becomes worthy to be worshipped like a temple." At another place, in his treatment of Maranasati, Upatissa gives a quotation from Nie-ti-li-po-tho-shiu-tolo2 涅底履波陀修多羅 which purports to say that if a man wants to reflect upon death, he should reflect upon a dead person and see the cause of his death. Now both these texts appear to be the same, the only difference being that in one case the word chu fil seems to be used as a translation of the word pada and in another case po-tho 波陀 a trans-literation of the same word 'pada' is used.

Upatissa, like Buddhaghosa, also refers to the Haliddavasanasutta<sup>3</sup> by using the Chinese translation (Yellow-Garment-Sutta) of that name. Upatissa constantly refers to the Abhidhamma, in which he seems to include also Paṭisambhidā, for passages definitely known to be from that text are given by Upatissa as from the Abhidhamma.<sup>4</sup> Places.

(ii) Now we come to the names of places. While speaking of the round kasiṇa, Upatissa says 'as round as Jambudīpa' (4.1a.5). In another place he speaks of the way to the country of Pāṭaliputta (Po-li-phu-to<sup>5</sup> 波利弗多).

Upatissa also refers to the Magadha country (6.13.8) and to the river Neranjara (p. 64).

Personages.

(iii) Let us now take the names of personages. It is interesting to note that in the section on Maranasati, Upatissa refers, among other names, to the names of the hoary sages, Vessamitta (San. Viśvāmitra) and Yamataggi<sup>1</sup> [San. Jamadagni, to which the Chinese transliteration Jā-mo-thā-li (閣 摩達 梨 7.9a.8.) corresponds], while Buddhaghosa refers (VIII. 19) to comparatively later personages in Hindu mythology, like Bhīmasena, Yuddhitthila (San. Yudhisthira), Vāsudeva, Cāņura. We also find the names of gods like Yāmā, Tusitā (6.20a.6), Akaniţtha, etc. He also refers to mythological personages like Mahāsudassna, Jotika, Jațila, Ghosita (9.2a.8), Mahāgovinda, etc. He has also given the names of [Aļāra] Kālāma, Uddaka Rāmaputta (5.12a.8-9). We find Upatissa mentioning the name of Gotama as well as the names of great Buddhist Worthies like Sāriputta, Moggallāna, Ananda, Anuruddha, Sobhita, Cūļapanthaka, Bakkula, Sanjīva, etc. Towards the end of the book while speaking about vipphārasamādhi, Upatissa gives a name which seems to be a Chinese transliteration of the name Moggaliputtatissa.2 Most of these names are the Chinese transliterations of Indian names, except in a few cases like the names Sañjīva, Cūlapanthaka, which Sanghapāla respectively translates as 正命 Right-Life (Saṃ-jīva), 小路 Small-Road. Quite a few of these names occur in the quotations from the Pāli texts which Upatissa gives.

Like these proper names which are retained in Chinese transliterations, it is interesting to note that there are many other words transliterated into Chinese by Sanghapāla, which point to the Indian origin of the words. These words may be classified as follows:—

Transliterations of Indian words.

Words like Caṇḍāla (10.9a.7), Nigaṇṭha (2.10a.8). Words like Acariya (ācārya: ā-cā-li), Upajjhāya, Veda (Wui-tho).

Names of semi-divine beings like Asura (9.6a.9.), Yakkha, (9.6a.9), Rakkhasa (6.13.1), Gandhabba (kān-to-po 7.8.4.).

1. See D. i. 184, 239-43; A. iv. 61.

2. p. 127. It is a point to be considered why this name is inserted in the Vim. In the corresponding Pāli passage from Ps. we find the names of only Sāriputta and Sañjīva. Can this be an interpolation? For, Mal. (p. 42) tells us on the authority of Nikāya-Sangraha that the Vajjiputtakas who joined the Abhayagiri sect did not accept the authority of Moggaliputta-Tissa.

Names of the nine divisions of Buddhist literature like Sutta, Shiu-to-lo), Geyya, Veyyākaraṇa, etc. (9.16a.89).

Technical words in Buddhism, such as Dhuta (2.1.4), Sangha, Samatha (4.15a.3) Vipassanā, (4.15a.4) Maṇḍala (4.1a.6) Pātimokkha, Pāramī (8.8.10 ff), Nibbāna, Pāññā (pān-ro 9.16.10), Sanghārāma (2.6a.1), Araññā (7.1a.3), Khaṇa (chā-nā 7.7a.9), Dāna (thāṇ 8.7.10), Samādhi (sāṇ-mī, 6.2a.1-2), Kalala (kyā-lo-lo, Abbuda (ā-phu-tho 7.13a.10), etc.

Names of garments: Kāsāva (12.18.7), Sanghāṭi (2.2a.7), Uttarāsanga (2.2a.8) Antarāvāsaka (2.2a.8), Koseyya, Kambala (2.7.3).

Names of fruits and trees like, Amba, (San. āmra: ām-lo), Kovidāra 3.2.6).

Names of scented wood: Candana, Tagara (7.13a.1).

Names of flowers and lotuses, such as, Uppala, Paduma, Pundarīka (5.7a.9) Kumuda (7.13.6-7), Kannikāra (5.21.2).

Periods of time, Asankheyya.

Number, Nahuta (San: nayuta: Nā-yu-thā).

There are some words which are sometimes translated and sometimes transliterated such as  $sam\bar{a}dhi$ ,  $pa\tilde{n}\tilde{a}$ ,  $\bar{a}n\bar{a}p\bar{a}na$  7.1.5 ff). And even the transliteration is not always the same. For instance, for uppala, we have sometimes yu-to-lo, (5.8.2) or sometimes yu-po-lo (5.7a.3) or even to-lo (10.20a.3); for Abhidhamma, we sometimes have pi-ta, or a-pi-ta, or sometimes we have a-pi-ta-mo: for  $\bar{a}cariya$  we have a-ca-li or ca-li (2.7.10); for Arhat we have a-lo-han or lo-han (6.18.4).

Reference to a Candāla. Let us note one peculiar fact about Upatissa. He seems to have some kind of contempt for, or a low opinion of, a Caṇḍāla. He refers to a Caṇḍāla in three different places. In one place, there is a reference to a Caṇḍāla where we are told in a simile that he has no desire for a princely throne. At another place (2.7.10), to see a Caṇḍāla on the way is considered to be a sufficient reason for the laxity in the observance of the practice of sapadāna-cārikā (going from house to house in succession for begging one's food). Upatissa says that if a mendicant sees a Caṇḍāla on the way, he should cover his begging-bowl and may skip over some houses and go further.1 In the third place we find lack of conscientiousness (ahirika) is compared to a Candāla.2

This sort of contempt for a Candala is something foreign to the original teaching of Buddhism, and in fact, in the early days of Buddhism, we find several people of the lowest class being even admitted to the Buddhist Sangha.3

Having thus seen practically everything that is valuable in the internal evidence of the Vimuttimagga, as far as the subjectmatter is concerned, let us now turn to the manner of expression, or the style of composition of this Vimuttimagga, as we have it now in its Chinese translation.

It is admittedly a treatise of the Abhidhamma and we find that its style of composition is in keeping with the style of the Abhidhamma books. A subject is treated by setting up a the Vim. number of questions and then answering them one after another. He gives the lakkhana, rasa, paccupatthana, and padatthana of almost everything that forms the subject of his exposition. Occasionally, as in the case of Metta4 etc., he also gives sampatti and vipatti. He treats the different sections of a particular subject separately, and then makes general remarks on all the different sections taken together. We see, for instance, that he treats mettā, karuņā, muditā, and upekkhā, or rūpa, vedanā, saññā, sankhāra and viññāna separately and then gives, like Buddhaghosa, general remarks under pakinnakakathā.5 Unlike Buddhaghosa, he gives no stories at all to illustrate his point. Like Buddhaghosa, he makes use of quotations from the Pāli texts, or other sources that are available to him. He also quotes a number of gathas as well as prose passages. We have already seen above that Upatissa was a skilful master in the use of similes. We have also noted that his interpretations are simple and quite natural. They are free from scholastic artificiality of Buddhaghosa.

If we look closely at the mode of translation accepted by Sanghapāla, we find that very often he tries to be quite literal. and naturally the Chinese translation would give no idea unless one knows the original technical words in Pali or Sanskrit for which the Chinese renderings stand. Sometimes we find, as in Tibetan translations of Buddhist Sanskrit works, that even the prefixes are translated by corresponding words in Chinese. We have already seen above how even the prefix Sam in the name Sanjīva is translated by 正, the Chinese equivalent of that prefix. Similarly, the prefix pati or pati in the word patibhāga is translated by pi 彼 and the Chinese equivalent for the whole word patibhāga is pi-phan 彼 分. Technical words like bhavanga, tadārammaṇa, upapattibhava are quite literally translated by 有 分, 彼 事, 生 有 respectively.

We have thus considered practically all the aspects of the internal evidence bearing on our problem, afforded by our texts, particularly by the Vimuttimagga. Let us now take a review of all the facts that we have learnt from the internal or external evidence.

A review.

We have seen that both the texts often quote from the same older sources like the Pāli texts of the Canon, the Porāņas, the Pubbācariyas, the Atthakathās, some specific work like the Petaka or Sān-Tsāng 三 藏 or some other common source which we may or may not be able to locate. We have also seen that although Upatissa uses some similes, which are common to the Visuddhimagga, still he has many similes of his own which show that he is a skilful master in handling similies or metaphors or illustrations. We have noted (p. xxvii) that he has some protracted similies which we do not find in the Visuddhimagga. We have also observed that in spite of some correspondences due to the common material which is drawn upon by both of them. Upatissa has some peculiar doctrinal points, which are quite distinct from those held by Buddhaghosa. In fact, Buddhaghosa is definitely opposed to several of those points. It has been seen that along with these differences in doctrinal points. there is also a difference in the interpretation of some words and in the treatment of some topics. Upatissa's interpretations are simpler and more natural than Buddhaghosa's and often they agree with the interpretations given in older works like the Vibhanga. There is a difference in the general exposition of even some sections such as those on Dependent Origination (hetu-paccayā or paticca-samuppāda), on Vedanā, Sankhāra and Viññāna. In the comparative table of contents, we have noticed that Upatissa gives the whole of the lest chapter to Sacca-pariccheda, although he has already given a part of the eleventh chapter for the exposition of the Noble Truths (Saccani). Further, we have also noticed that there are about half a dozen references in both the books to the same views held by some other theorists, that there are at least nine references in Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga to the views of others, whom he merely calls 'others' or 'some', but which exactly tally with the views advocated or accepted by Upatissa in his Vimuttimagga. Incidentally, from the external evidence afforded by Dhammapāla's Commentary on the Visuddhimagga, we have noted that in at least four of these cases, the reference is to the Abhavagirivadins. And besides, the most important reference for our purpose is the mention that Dhammapala makes in one case. He definitely refers to Upatissa and his book, the Vimuttimagga, and says that Buddhaghosa has these [two] in his mind. We have šeen that where one goes into a detailed treatment, the other is concise, or that where one is concise, the other goes into details. We have noted that occasionally Upatissa introduces quite a new matter. We find that Upatissa refers to a work called Sān Tsāng 三 藏(a quotation from which tallies with a passage ascribed by Buddhaghosa to Petaka) and to another work called Shiu-to-lo-Nieh-ti-li or Nieh-ti-li-po-tho-Shiu-to-lo, which so far we could not identify with any known Text. In the names of personages mentioned by Upatissa, we noticed two important names of Viśvāmitra and Jamadagni, the hoary sages of Brahmanical literature, as contrasted with Bhīmasena, Yudhisthira, Vāsudeva, Cāņura, personages of later Hindu mythology. We have also seen how even in the Chinese translation, Sanghapāla retained many Indian words in their Chinese transliterations. And lastly we have also noted Upatissa's attitude towards the Candalas which seems to be rather inconsistent with the original attitude of the Buddha and his early followers.

When we consider all these facts in the light of the external evidence afforded by Dhammapāla's comment, what conclusion shall we be justified in drawing? When we take our stand on Dhammapāla's explicit testimony in one case that Buddhaghosa alludes to Upatissa and his Vimuttimagga, and that in four other cases the reference is to Abhayagirivādins, shall we not be justified in drawing conclusion that Buddhaghosa, while writing several paragraphs in his book, Visuddhimagga, has Abhayagirivādins and Upatissa's Vimuttimagga in his mind, although he does not refer to them by name? As a natural corollary, Upatissa must be supposed to have advocated the views which were later accepted by the Abhayagirivādins.

But it might be argued what about the other two cases (p. xlii) that we have also noted above—one in which Upatissa refers to a view that is supported by Buddhaghosa, and the other in which Upatissa seems to have anticipated the objection raised by Buddhaghosa to the view held by him?

In view of the overwhelming evidence that we have given above in favour of the probability that Upatissa and his school have been at the back of the mind of Buddhaghosa, we can explain these allusions by Upatissa on the ground that they do not refer to the views of Buddhaghosa and his Visuddhimagga, but to the views that later came to be identified with those of the school of Mahāvihāra.

Here one may raise the question: 'Is the evidence given by Dhammapāla a reliable one?' Let us try to answer this question.

Dhamma- Buddi pāla. tittha

At the end of the Paramatthamañjūsā, the Commentary on Buddhaghosa's Visuddhimagga, we find the colophon: Badaratitthavihāravāsinā Ācariya-Dhammapālena katā Paramatthamañjūsā nāma Visuddhimagga-Tīkā samattā. 'Here ends the Commentary on the Visuddhimagga, the Commentary composed by Acariya-Dhammapāla, who resided in Badaratitthavihāra'. At the end of the commentaries on works like Thera- Thera-Gatha. Petavatthu, Vimānavatthu, and Netti-pakarana we find the information about Dhammapāla that he lived in the Badaratithavihara. So it appears to be evident that the author of the Paramatthamañjūsā and the author of the commentaries on Thera-Gāthā, Therī-Gāthā, Petavatthu, Vimānavatthu and Netti-pakarana, are one and the same person. Sāsanavamsa (p. 33) tells us the same fact about Acariva Dhammapāla, and further we learn that Dhammapāla also composed the Tīkās on the Dīgha, Majjhima and Samyutta Nikāyas and Sāriputta composed the Tīkas on the Anguttara Nikāya. It, further, states that the Badaratitha is in the country of Damilas, not far from the island of Ceylon. Gandhavamsa (p. 60) also mentions among fourteen works ascribed to 'Acariya Dhammapāla, the Commentary on the Visuddhimagga, and the Atthakathas on the Netti-pakarana, Thera Gatha, Petavatthu, Vimānavatthu, etc.

This Acariya Dhammapāla is supposed, though there is no direct evidence for this, to have lived not long after Buddhaghosa himself. There is only an indirect evidence that we get from their works. Both belong to the same tradition and seem to be drawing upon the same old material. At the end of the commentaries on the Petavatthu, Vimānavatthu and Therī-Gāthā, Dhammapāla says that for the composition of his commentaries he has used the old Aṭṭhakathās (Porāṇa-Aṭṭhakathā). So it is very likely that there was not very long time that elapsed between Buddhaghosa and Dhammapāla.¹ When the famous Chinese traveller, Yuan Chuän, speaks of his visit to Kāñcīpura in South India, in or about 640 A.D., he tells us that Kāñcīpura was the birthplace of Dharmapāla.² Although there is no definite proof to show that he was the same as our Dhammapāla, still it is very likely, says Dr. Rhys Davids,³ that the reference is to our Dhammapāla.

It will thus be seen that if Dhammapāla, who, as we have noted, may not have lived long after Buddhaghosa, (perhaps not later than two centuries), makes a definite statement about a certain school such as that of Abhayagirivādins or about Upatissa and his book, we have no reason to doubt it, especially when it is supported by other circumstantial evidence.

Let us see what circumstantial evidence we get from the historical and religious conditions in Ceylon at the time of Buddhaghosa's arrival in that country.

It is common knowledge that Buddhaghosa belonged to the Mahāvihāra School which had in his time a powerful rival in the school of the Abhayagiri-vihāra. To understand the situation in Ceylon at this time let us go into more details about the history of the Abhayagiri school.<sup>4</sup>

On the spot where the Abhayagiri monastery stood there was in very early times a Titthārāma, a place of residence for holy men who belonged to other religions. The Abhayagiri monastery was established in Ceylon 218 years after the establishment of the Mahāvihāra monastery. This was so called because it was established by King Abhaya (Vaṭṭagāmaṇī) and because it was established in a place where a Nigaṇṭha by name Giri was living. It was given over to Mahātissa, who subsequently was expelled from the Sangha of the Mahāvihāra on a charge of having too much of worldly contact. One of his disciples, being enraged with the community of the Mahāvihāra for the expulsion of his teacher, left that vihāra with some followers and established a new sect which subsequently came to be called by the name of Abhayagirivādins. These people branched off from the Theravāda of the Mahāvihāra. They split the Theravāda-monks a second time when they broke the community of monks at the Dakkhināvihāra.

This Abhavagiri school which owed its origin purely to a disciplinary measure against an individual, gradually came to be a centre of Buddhist monks, who did not agree with the community at the Mahāvihāra on doctrinal points.3 monks from Pallar(? 1)ārāma in India came to Ceylon. They belonged to the Vajjiputta-Nikāya descended from those who refused to recognize Moggaliputta-Tissa's council. Their teacher was Acariva Dhammaruci. He, finding no favour with the Mahāvihāra community, joined the Abhayagiri fraternity, which thenceforward came to be known as Dhammaruci-Nikāya.4 This school continued to disturb the peace of Ceylonese monks for nearly twelve centuries and the monks belonging to this sect no doubt produced literary works setting forth their own point of view.5 Unfortunately, however, religious intolerance led to the persecution of the monks of the Abhayagiri sect and many of their books were burnt.

The Abhayagirivādins were on the descent or on the ascent as the central political power in Ceylon persecuted them or supported them. From the history of Ceylon we learn that King Gothābhaya banished (about 254 A.D.)<sup>6</sup> sixty monks from Abhayagiri who were called Vetulyavādins and who were supposed to be great 'thorns' (kanṭaka) in the religion of the Buddha. At another time, we read, during the reign of King

At the time when Buddhaghosa came to Ceylon, King Mahānāma<sup>3</sup> was ruling. Mahānāma, before he became the king, was a member of the Order. He became infatuated with the wife of his brother Upatissa, who was subsequently killed by her. Mahānāma left the Order, seized the throne, and married his brother's wife. The Mahavihara community did not look with favor at the treachery of Mahānāma. So Mahānāma and his wife were supporting the Abhayagiri School.4

We have another testimony to support our belief that the Abhayagiri sect was in a prosperous condition when Buddhaghosa visited Cevlon. Fa-hien visited Cevlon, stayed there for two vears and returned about the year 413 Λ.D.<sup>5</sup> He tells us that at his time there were five thousand monks in the Abhayagirivihāra. He describes the great ceremony of Tooth-worship and speaks of the Tooth being taken to Abhayagiri.7 He further tells us that there were only three thousand monks in the Mahāvihāra establishment.8 He also speaks of a King who built a new monastery.9

All this evidence goes to show that Abhayagiri was prosperous when Buddhaghosa went to Cevlon. He found the Abhayagirivadins in ascendency. He may have had this book Vimuttimagga before him and it is not unlikely that he wanted to compose another book that would far outshine the Vimuttimagga. He does not make any direct reference to the Abhavagirivadins, probably because of contempt for his opponents and also because, as we have stated above, the Abhayagirivadins at that time were in great favour of the political power in Ceylon.

Now the questions that come next are: "Who is Upatissa? Where and when did he compose his book, Vimuttimagga? In what language did he write it? What can we know about him from it?"

Indian origin of Vim.

To these questions unfortunately we cannot give very satisfactory answers. We can simply suggest certain probabilities. Beyond the bare mention of Upatissa by Dhammapāla, we have no other external evidence. From Dhammapāla's remarks in his commentary on the Visuddhimagga we can simply draw an inference that Upatissa's book was later accepted by the monks from the Abhavagiri school. We have already seen above in the history of the Abhayagiri sect that many monks from India came and joined that sect. It is very likely that Vimuttimagga was one of the books brought over from India. internal evidence of the book we may say that there is no reference to any name2 or place in Ceylon. We find in this book many words which are transliterations of Indian words. list of worms residing in different parts of the body gives names which are transliterations of Indian names. These names must have been taken by Upatissa from some old work or works on medical science. Besides, the references to a Candala, which we have already noticed, also point to the origin of the book in India,3 particularly, in South or Dravidian India where there is a very strong prejudice against Candalas.

My discovery of the Tibetan version4 of the third chapter on 'dhutas' is also important. The original of the Tibetan as well as the Chinese version seems to be the same. Wherever the Chinese text differs from the Pali text, the Tibetan also differs. It shows that the book did not disappear from India when its copy was taken out of India on way to China but it was studied in Buddhist schools of India at least till the eighth or ninth century A.D. when the Buddhist Pandits from India commenced to visit Tibet. The name of Vidyākaraprabha who is mentioned along with a Tibetan collaborator in the colophon of the Tibetan version is given by Shri Sarat Chandra Das in his 'Indian Pandits in the Land of Snow' pp. 49-50, among the names of those learned scholars who were invited by King Ral-pa-chan of Tibet in the ninth century. This Tibetan text provides an additional evidence to show the Indian origin of the book. It does not appear to be probable that a text from Ceylon was taken over to India and there it was studied in Buddhist schools and that it assumed such importance as to be translated, in part at least, in Tibetan.

As to the date of the composition of this book, our surmise is that this work seems to belong to a period not far later than the literary period of post-canonical Pali Literature, when the Netti and the Petakopadesa-both of which are companionvolumes by Mahākaccāna-were composed. For, we find in the Vimuttimagga a number of passages1 which closely agree with passages from the Petakopadesa and they have been given or indicated at different places in foot-notes. For instance, see a passage in the Introductory chapter (p. 2): Dve hetū dve paccayā sāvakassa sammāditthiyā uppādāya: parato ca ghoso saccānusandhi ajjhattañ ca yoniso manasikāro. Compare with this Vimuttimagga 1.2.6 從他聞.....自正念. Here we find that the words 自正念 exactly correspond to ajjhattañ ca yoniso manasikāro. The text of the Vimuttimagga is more akin to the text of the Petakopadesa than to the passage from M.i.294, A.i.87, which also we have given in the foot-note on p. 2. editor of Netti, gives as the date of the composition of Netti 'about the beginning of our (Christian) era, or shortly later."2 Our book therefore, may be put somewhere in the first two centuries after the beginning of the Christian era.

definite statement, namely the original language of the Vimutti- Language magga. Whether the text was originally in Pali or some Buddhist Sanskrit, (closely allied to Pali-Prakrit), like that of Divyavadāna, Šikṣāsamuccaya, Lalitavistara or Mahāvastu, it is not possible to say with certainty. From a large number of Pali books quoted or used by the author, it may be infered that Upatissa also wrote his book in Pali. We have indicated in the main part of this book how his passages correspond to passages from Pali literature, particularly the Nikāyas, Vibhanga and Patisambhidā. The Chinese transliterations also are not much helpful in enabling us to decide this point. For instance. although Jā-mo-thā-li, ām-lo, nā-yu-thā correspond respectively to Sanskrit Jamadagni, āmra, nayuta, the word uppala or utpala is found to be transliterated both by u-po-lo, u-to-lo, or to-lo as Personal information about Upa.

What we know of Upatissa from this book is very little. As we have noted above, he seems to be acquainted with Indian medical works. In addition to the list of worms in the different parts of the body, we find Upatissa going into the details of the development of the foetus from week to wek. He also gives (7.17a.5-7) the names of several diseases—those of the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body, head, heart, mouth, teeth, asthma, cold and fever (malaria), epileptic fits, fever leading to delirium, diseases of the skin like leprosy, boils or blisters, haemorrhage, intestinal and urinary diseases, etc. We may also recall the simile, which he has given (p. xxix) of a hot drink as being not salutary to a man who has the excess of bile in his He has also illustrated the appropriateness of humours. the order of the four Noble Truths by the simile of a physician who sees the symptoms of a disease, knows the cause of it and then prescribes an appropriate remedy for it.1 Upatissa appears to be very harsh with an absolutely ignorant man. He would prescribe no kammatthana for him but he asks him to stay with his teacher and develop the power of understanding.2

Several references to Sāriputta in this text make it clear that Sāriputta, the favourite disciple of the Buddha, could never be the author of this book. Also, Prof. Nagai's suggestion that Upatissa, who belonged to the line of the Theras in the first century A.D. in Ceylon, may have been the author of this book is not borne out by the internal evidence. We have already seen that there are no references to places in Ceylon and it may also be borne in mind that the author of this book reveals no special mastery of the Vinaya which is claimed by Prof. Nagai for that Upatissa who lived in the first century A.D. in Ceylon. So his theory will have to be rejected.

Here, some one may still say that Dhammapāla's testimony may not be considered as reliable unless it is corroborated by other evidence, and therefore the correspondence between our two texts can as well be explained on the supposition that when Buddhaghosa's work, the Visuddhimagga, came to be well-known, some one with leanings toward the Abhayagiri sect may as well have composed this book, Vimuttimagga.

To this we may reply that the whole of the internal evidence is against any supposition of that kind. Buddhaghosa's work decidedly appears to be an amplification of, and a great improvement upon, the bare old skeleton-like frame of the Vimuttimagga. For instance, we may here recall what we have already noted that Buddhaghosa, with the possible exception of one or two cases, gives a greater number of the categorical enumerations of the different technical or doctrinal points than Upatissa gives four categories of sīla while B. gives Upatissa gives four ways of cultivating ānāpānasati, while Buddhaghosa gives eight. Upatissa gives ten kinds of catudhātuvavatthāna, while Buddhaghosa gives thirteen. Upatissa, we find only six things mentioned that correspond to Buddhaghosa's palibodhas, while in the Visuddhimagga we have ten. Upatissa gives only four advantages of samādhi, while Buddhaghosa gives five. Upatissa mentions five kinds of āhāre patikkūla-saññā, while Buddhoghosa gives ten. And such examples could be multiplied.

Similarly we have noted that Upatissa's interpretations of some terms like bhikkhu, Pātimokkha, Dhamma, rūpasaññā, ākāsa, nibbāna, etc. are simpler, more natural, devoid of scholastic artificiality and agree with older interpretations of canonical books. This clearly shows that Buddhaghosa's work marks a decidedly later stage than that of the Vimuttimagga.

Thus to conclude,

- (i) from the internal evidence of the book, (a) which shows abundant similarities between the Vimuttimagga and the Visuddhimagga, (b) which shows that many of the untraced passages in the Visuddhimagga ascribed by Buddhaghosa to the Porāṇas, or to the Aṭṭhakathās are found in the Vimuttimagga, (c) which shows that the Vimuttimagga belongs to a school different from that of Buddhaghosa, and that it contains as many as nine passages giving the views that exactly tally with those ascribed by Buddhaghosa to 'some';
- (ii) from the external evidence afforded by the direct testimony of Dhammapāla, who comments that in a particular place Buddhaghosa refers to Upatissa and his Vimuttimagga; and
- (iii) from the general political and religious conditions in Ceylon, at the time of Buddhaghosa's visit to that country in the first quarter of the fifth century, we think it highly probable that Buddhaghosa wrote his Visuddhimagga after the Vimuttimagga, and that very probably he had that book before him when he wrote his Visuddhimagga. We only say 'highly probable'. Because before the final decision can be given on this subject, we should like Dhamma-pāla's statement to be confirmed by some other evidence; and also the following points—which cannot be decided in the present state of our knowledge of the Buddhist and allied literatures—will first have to be cleared up:—

- (i) the source of the passages in the Vimuttimagga such as that which gives the names of worms in the human body, that which gives the development of the foetus from week to week;
  - (ii) whether Sān-Tsāng 三 藏 is the same as Petaka;
- (iii) the identification of Nieh-ti-li-po-tho-shiu-to-lo (涅底 飕 陀 修 多 羅) with any known sutta.

Out of the four probable theories, that we suggested at the beginning of this introduction, we have just shown that the second cannot be accepted. The third also is not acceptable because of the clear references in the Visuddhimagga to the views of other theorists, which we have shown, on the authority of Dhammapāla, to be the views of the Abhayagirivādins and which exactly tally with the views given in the Vimuttimagga. The fourth also cannot be accepted because we do not find any touches in the Vimuttimagga that are decidedly purely Mahāyānistic. And so, the only theory, that seems to us as the most probable, is the theory no. 1:

That Buddhaghosa had Upatissa's book, Vimuttimagga, before him and that he, taking the frame work of Upatissa's Vimuttimagga, amplified it with his scholastic erudition and composed his work, Visuddhimagga, which has certainly far outshone Upatissa's Vimuttimagga.

The references in the Vimuttimagga are given to the handy and popular edition of the book, printed and published at Bi-ling 足酸 in the province of Kiang-su 江蘇 in 1918. I have also occasionally given references to the Taisho edition of the Buddhist Chinese Tripitaka published under the direction of Prof. J. Takakusu and Prof. K. Wantanabe.

The text of the Vimuttimagga is given in volume No. 32 of this series, pp. 399-461 (no. 1648). I have also consulted, for checking up the different readings, the Tokio edition of the Tripiṭaka. The text of the Vimuttimagga is found in this series in case 24, Vol. III [ 藏 三] pp. 22-74. The text of the Visuddhimagga that I have used is the one that has been edited by Henry Clark Warren and revised by Prof. Dharmānanda Kosambi. It is expected to be shortly published in the Harvard Oriental Series.

1. pp. xvii-xviii.

<sup>2.</sup> The twelve dhutangas, ten Pāramitas, the Buddhadhammas mentioned by Upa. [see pp. 16, 64-65] agree with the Pāli tradition. They do not agree with the lists in the Mvy. 1128-39, 914-923, 135-53 and Chinese Dharmasangraha, XXXIV (pp. 31, 118), V (pp. 24, 121) and XLI (pp. 34, 119).

I cannot conclude this introduction without acknowledging my debt. I have to express my deep gratitude to Prof. K. T. Mei, who was teaching Chinese in Harvard University during my stay there (1929-32). He encouraged me in undertaking the study of Chinese, and but for his help it would have been impossible for me to accomplish anything in this line of research. I have also to express my debt to Prof. Dharmananda Kosambi, my teacher, who first initiated me into the field of Buddhist studies, especially in Pāli Literature, for going over my first draft and making valuable suggestions. I have also to express my sincere thanks to Prof. Walter E. Clark and to the late Prof. J. H. Woods, of Harvard University—who alas! is no longer living-who looked over my work and made some useful suggestions when these pages were first being penned about five or six years ago. And last, but not least, I cannot forget my friends, Mr. Hideo Kishimoto and Mr. J. R. Ware who were of great help to me in checking references to Chinese books and discussing the interpretations of some knotty passages.

CHAPTER I

NIDANAM

Namo Tassa Bhagavato Arahato Sammāsambuddhassa

[Bk. 1.1.4-1.4.5; Tak. 399c-400 b. cf. Vis. I.1-15]

"Sīla, Samādhi, Paññā and Anuttarā Vimutti—these N.O. dhammas the illustrious Gotama understood in succession."

With this introductory stanza, Upatissa (henceforth abbreviated as Upa.) commences his introductory chapter. He continues—

'When a man has to reach the other shore, the Nibbāna, he has also to know the way that would enable him to reach that state. He must ask things about the Sutta, Abhidhamma and Vinaya. I must tell the way to Deliverance. Listen to me attentively.'

Upa. next gives us a brief comment on the introductory stanza given above.  $S\bar{\imath}la$  means  $s\bar{\imath}la$ -samvara.  $Sam\bar{a}dhi$  means avikkhepa.  $Pa\tilde{n}\tilde{a}$  means  $sambodhi\tilde{n}\tilde{a}na$ . Vimutti means escaping from fetters.  $Anuttar\tilde{a}$  means  $an\tilde{a}sav\tilde{a}$ . He comments also on the other words in that stanza.

In continuation of the same, Upa. classifies Vimutti into five kinds:

(i) Vikkhambhana-vimutti: to check the nivaranas XIII. 12 while practising the first trance.

(ii) Tadanga-vimutti: to be free from ditthis while cultivating the nibbedhabhāgiyasamādhi.

(iii) Samuccheda-vimutti: to remove and destroy all kinds of ties or bonds.

(iv) Paṭippassaddhi-vimutti: to enjoy the cittappassaddhi at the time of the attainment of the fruit.

(v) Nissaraṇa-vimutti: Anupādisesa-nibbāna.

1. See A. ii. 2; D. ii. 123:

Sīlam samādhi paññā ca vimutti ca anuttarā anubuddhā ime dhammā Gotamena yasassinā.

'That by which one reaches Deliverance is the Path of Deliverance, the Maggapaţipadā. And this way to Deliverance is accomplished with the help of sīla, samādhi and paññā. And I must tell this way.'

Upa. here goes on telling us why it is necessary to tell about the Path. Because, says he, there are some men who are 'with little dust' (apparajakkha) and who wish to attain Deliverance but if they do not know of this path, they are like blind men who wish to go far off to a distant country without any guide. These men will only suffer without reaching their goal. They wish to attain the Deliverance but they do not know the ways and means by which it could be attained. He gives another quotation in which the Blessed One is said to declare that there are two ways in which one can have sammā-diṭṭhi, either by learning about it from others, or by proper reflection. So, he says, he must speak about the Way to Deliverance (Vimuttimagga).

I. 10.

The vikkhambhana-vimutti-magga is fulfilled with the help of the three khandhas, sīlakkhandha, samādhik handha and paññākhandha. He explains these terms, the first meaning sammā-vācā, sammā-kammanta, and sammā-ājīva and other things included with them; the second meaning sammā-vāyāma, sammā-sati and sammā-samādhi and other things included with them; and the last meaning sammā-diṭṭhi, sammā-sankappa and other allied things. He gives also another alternative explanation. One must learn the three sikkhās, adhisīla-sikkhā, adhicitta-sikkhā, and adhipaññā-sikkhā which terms also are explained. By these sikkhās, the three visuddhis of sīla, citta and diṭṭhi are accomplished which are no more than sīla, samādhi and paññā.

I. 11.

This vikkhambhana-vimutti-magga is ādi-kalyāṇa, majjhe-kalyāṇa and pariyosāna-kalyāṇa in so far as the sīla, samādhi and paññā, which are the ādi, majjha and anta of this Path, and kalyāṇa. By means of sīla, one removes desires and attachments, and finds delight in faultless pleasure. By samādhi, one removes self-torments and delights in pīti and sukha. By paññā, one makes the saccapariccheda and attains the Middle Path, and is profoundly delighted in Sambodhi.

If the  $s\bar{\imath}la$  is more intensely developed and the other two less, then one becomes  $Sot\bar{a}panna$  or  $Sakad\bar{a}g\bar{a}m\bar{\imath}$ . If the  $s\bar{\imath}la$  and  $sam\bar{a}dhi$  are more developed, and  $pa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}\bar{a}$  less, one becomes  $An\bar{a}g\bar{a}m\bar{\imath}$ . Practising all the three in their perfections, one becomes an Arhat, anuttara-vimutta.

CHAPTER II

SILA-PARICCHEDO

[Bk. 1.4.6-1.18.3 (end of the Bk.); Tak. 400c-404b. Cf. Vis. I.16—end of the First chapter.]

Upa. at the outset sets up questions which he takes one after another and explains them himself.

I. 17; diff. 1. Kim sīlam?

Cetanā-sīlam

Samvara-sīlam

Avītikkama-sīlam

[Cf. B. I. 17 where we have a quotation from Ps. i. 44 which adds cetasika-sīla after the first of these sīlas. The explanation of these differs except in the last case where only it agrees!]

In attempting to give another alternative explanation, Up. says: pahānaṭṭhena saṃvaro; sabbe kusalā dhammā, idaṃ sīlaṃ. And in continuation of this he gives a long passage² from Ps. i. 46-47 which is also quoted in B.I. 140. The passage given by Upa. [1.4a.3-1.5.7; Tak. 400c. 8-26.] is only a part of that given by B. and it is substantially the same from nekkhammena kāmacchandassa pahānaṃ—(sixth line in that para.) to arahattamaggena sabbakilesānaṃ pahānaṃ sīlaṃ, veramaṇī, cctanā, saṃvaro, avītikkamo sīlaṃ (fourth line from the bottom of that page), except that Upa. does not give, as far as can be judged from all the three editions of our Chinese text, any words corresponding to paṭinissaggānupassanāyaādānassa.

I. 20 q.d.

I. 140. s.a.

2. Kim sīlassa lakkhaņam?

To have samvara and to remove asamvara. Upa. goes into the details of what constitutes asamvara. He explains it as violating the Pātimokkhadhamma, paccayadhamma, and indriyadhamma, which terms again he explains.

3-5. Kāni rasa-paccupaţţhāna-padaţţhānāni?

I. 21-22 diff.

Anavajja-sukham raso, anupāyāso paccupaṭṭhānam, and sucaritattayu-samācāro padaṭṭhānam. He also gives another alternative that somanassa is the rasa, avippaṭisāra paccupaṭṭhāna, and indriya-gutti padaṭṭhāna.

6. Ko sīlassa ānisamso?

Avippațisăro. And the same passage as is quoted in Vis. I. 23 I. 23 from A.v. 1 can be traced in a slightly abridged form. He also gives many other advantages that are included by B. in verses in I.24. This paragraph is concluded with the remark: evam anantānisaṃsaṃ sīlaṃ.

7. Kimattham sīlam?

I. 19 p.a.

Sītalaṭṭhaṃ, Seṭṭhaṭṭhaṃ, Sīlanaṭṭhaṃ, Sabhāvaṭṭhaṃ, Sukhadukkhabhāva-

sampanuttattham:

Cf. B.I. 19. This is much more detailed than B's. treatment. This gives many more atthas than those given by B.

Sirattham
Sitalattham
Patitthattham

The first two of these are referred to by B. in 1.19 where he ascribes them to  $a\tilde{n}\tilde{n}e$ . [Dhammapāla explains this word simply by  $a\tilde{n}\tilde{n}e$   $\bar{a}cariy\bar{a}$ .] Upa. explains these by giving very appropriate similes.

I. 19 refers to the first two

8. Ācārassa (行) ca sīlussa ca kiṃ nānākaraṇaṃ?

N.C.

When a man works strenuously and resolves upon dhutas, it is  $\bar{a}c\bar{a}ra$  and not  $s\bar{\imath}la$ .  $S\bar{\imath}la$  is also named  $\bar{a}c\bar{a}ra$  and samvara but acceptance (of dhutas) is  $\bar{a}c\bar{a}ra$ .

I. 38 9. Kati sīlāni?

Kusalam sīlam

Akusalam silam

Abyākatam sīlam

These are explained as bodily and vocal activities, respectively meritorious, demeritorious and free from depravities (āsavas); good, bad and pure livelihood; and [activities] bearing good, bad and no fruition. [B. refers in I.38 to this classification given in Ps. i. 44, but rejects it.]

N.C. 10. Kim-samuţthānam sīlam?1

Kusalacitta-samuṭṭhānaṃ kusalaṃ sīlaṃ. Akusalacitta-samuṭṭhānaṃ akusalaṃ sīlaṃ. Abyākatacitta-samuṭṭhānam abyākataṃ sīlaṃ.

N.C. 11. Kāni sīlassa ādi-majjha-pariyosānāni?

Samādānam ādi, avītikkamo majjho, abhirati pariyosānam.

- N.C. 12-13. Kati dhammā sīlassa antarāyikā? Kati sīlassa hetū?

  - 3. Does this correspond to Vasubandhu's asamprojanya (see Triṃśikā-Vijñāpti, p. 32) for which Suzuki reads 不 正 見 ? See D. T. Suzuki, Studies in Lankāvatāra Sūtra, p. 396.
  - 4. See Kimura, ibid., p. 39. It gives some terms which correspond to a few of these.

  - (vi) Nissitam: subdivided into three classes of tanhā, I. 29 p.a. diṭṭhi and māna, of which only the first two I. 33 correspond to B.I. 29, while the explanation of the third as given by Upa. is found in the first tika of hīna, majjhima and panīta of B.I. 33.
    - Anissitam: vimutti-sambhāra-sampannam. Upa. also adds: nissitam duppaññena abhinanditam, anissitam sappaññena abhinanditam.

(x) Kāla-pariyantam1

This corresponds to B's, classification of I. 30. The explanation generally agrees with that of B. Upa. adds that the fruit of the former takes time to mature while that of the Apānakotikam 1 latter is immediate (無時).

(B) Katham tividham?

- (i) Pāpa-nimmūlanena avītikkamo (止惡不犯): stop all evil; although [sīla] is not accepted, still he considers it to have been accepted and does not even think of transgression.

Avisuddham

S.a. with B.I. 36 except that Upa. adds here one more case under the 1. 36 s.a. heading of avisuddha: sañcicca āpattiyā āpajjanam; āpannāya āpattiyā avippațisāro. He also remarks: sace yogāvacarassa sīlam avisuddham hoti, gambhīro vippaṭisāro uppādetabbo; sace vematikam, āpannāpattim jāneuva, iccassa phāsu bhavissati.

  - Majjhimam: tainted by smaller taints and associated with santutthi.
  - Panītam: not tainted by anything and associated with santutthi.

kusala-sīlānuppattiyā akusala-sīlassa vūpasamo; Arahattūpapattiyā kusala-sīlassa vūpasamo.

Nirodha-magga-patipadā-sīlam: cattāro sammappadhānā. When thus classified these four should be considered as sīla and not vāyāmas.

1 42-52

(v) (a) Pātimokkha-samvara-sīlam [B. I. 42-52.] Like B., Upa. gives the following passage from Vbh. 244 to explain this sila:

Idhabhikkhu pātimokkha-samvara-samvuto ācāra-gocara-sampanno aņumattesu vajjesu bhayadassāvī, samādāya sikkhati sikkhāpadesu.

Upa., like B., comments on this whole passage. [It is worth noting how his comment differs from that of B. as well as from that in Vibhanga 245-248]

Idhā ti imasmim satthu-sāsane [lit. odhamme].

Bhikkhū ti puthujjana-kalyānako; api ca sekho, I. 43 diff. asekho, āneñjadhammo.¹

Pātimokkhan ti sīlam, patitthā, ādi, caraṇam, saṃyamo, saṃvaro, mokkho,² anibandho, pamu-kham kusalānam dhammānam samāpattiyā.

[It should be noted that the comment in Vbh. p. 246 on this passage is exactly the same except that there is no word corresponding to anibandho. Vis. I. 43 gives a comment which is quite different.]

Saṃvaro ti kāyika-vācasika kammassa avītikkumo. Saṃvuto ti Pātimokkha-saṃvarcna upeto. Viharatī ti catu³-saṃvarena saṃvuto.

Acāra-gocara-sampanno. The comment on these words 1.44-51 substantially agrees with that given by B. I.44-51 in the quotations from Vibhanga 246-47.

Anumattesu vajjesu bhayadassāvī. The comment 1.52 on this agrees with that of B.1.52.

Samādāya sikkhati sikkhāpadesu.

Kāni sikkhāpadānī ti vuccanti? Sattappabhedo<sup>4</sup> saṃvaro.

- (b) Ajīva-pārisuddhi-sīlaṃ: micchājīvena avītikkamo. Katamo micchājīvo?
- 1. That is how I should like to emend the punctuation, taking this expression with what precedes rather than with what follows. For the expression bhikkhu āneñjappatto see A. ii. 184.
- 2. Vibhanga reads mukham but in the footnote gives a variant mokham.
  - 3. Which four?
- 4. Does this refer to the seven classes of the rules of Vinaya, namely, pārājikā, sanghādisesa, aniyata, nissaggiya-pācittiya and pācittiya (treated as one class) pātidesanīya, sekhiya and adhikaraņa-samatha? Or, does it refer to the abstinence from the seven āpattikkhandhas, detailed in DhsA. p. 394 as follows: Pārājikam, sanghādisesam, thullaccayam, pācittiyam, pātidesanīyam, dukkatam, dubbhāsitan ti satta āpattiyo?

I.44] and a list of other different kinds of micchājīva, summarising the list in D.I.9. of words such as angam, nimittam, uppādam, etc. partly quoted by B. in I. 83. Upa. concludes: evamādiko nānāvidho micchājīvo. Micchājīvā paṭiviratī ti pārisuddhi-sīlam.

I. 53-58 q.d.

- (c) Indriya-saṃvara-sīlaṃ. Upa. explains this in a way which agrees with what B. explains in brief in I.59. But the detailed explanation which is given by B. in I.53-58 is quite different from that of Upa. who gives nine ways—some of which are not quite clear—in which this indriya-samvara can be accomplished.

  - 7. yātrā ca me bhavissati,
  - 8. anavajjatā ca phāsuvihāro cā ti.

This whole passage is commented upon. The comment agrees with the general spirit of the comment of B. (I.89-94) though it is not without variations in detail.

<sup>1.</sup> Ordinarily this word means kosajja or thinamiddha; but there is no doubt that what is intended here is  $kuhan\bar{a}$ .

These eight ways can be reduced to four paccavekkhanas:

N.C.

- 1. pahātabba-paccavekkhaṇā, covering the first two of the eight ways mentioned above;
- 2. · paccaya (事)-paccavekkhanā, covering the third, fourth and fifth;
- 3. yātrā (自安)-paccavekkhanā, covering the sixth and seventh;
- 4. parittānisamsa-paccavekkhaņā, covering the last.

These four paccavekkhanas can further be reduced to three: antadvaya-parivajjanam, majjhimāya ca paṭipadāya scvanam.

Upa. explains these terms and in continuation of the same, he gives the passage: paţisankhā yoniso cīvaram paţisevati, yāvadeva sītassa paṭighātāya, unhassa paṭighātāya, ḍaṃsamakasa-vātātapa-siriṃsapa-samphassānam paṭighātāya, yāvadeva hiri-kopīna-paṭicchādantthaṃ. B. has given the comment on this passage in I. 85-88.

In the same way regarding the acceptance of medical requisites. While begging his food or taking his medicine or using his clothes or bedding, the mendicant should reflect, from day to day, and from time to time, that he depends upon others for these things.

The former teachers have said of the four kinds of paribhogas:

[Cf. B.I. 125 where we have the same four kinds, although their explanation differs considerably.]

I. 125 but diff. explanation.

They ya-paribhogo: dussīlassa paribhogo.

Inaparibhogo: ahirikassa anottappassa micchājīvikassa paribhogo.

Dāyajja-paribhogo: ātāpissa (or uṭṭhānavato puri-sassa) paribhogo.

Sāmi-paribhogo: ariyānam paribhogo. [Cf. B.I.

125-127.]

There are also two kinds of paribhogas:

aparisuddha: sa-hirottappassa apaccavekkhitvā

parisuddha: sa-hirottappassa mattaññuno pāpakesu cittuppādesu nibbindantassa.

Upa. remarks about all the four kinds of sīlas, mentioned in the fourfold division in this way:

98,100,

Vinaya-saṃvara-sīlaṃ (substituted for pātimokkha-saṃvara mentioned above) adhimattāya saddhāya paripūritaṃ hoti, ājīva-pūrisuddhi-sīlaṃ adhimattena viriyena paripūritaṃ hoti, indriya-saṃvara-sīlaṃ adhimattāya saddhāya (? satiyā)² paripūritaṃ hoti, paccaya-sevana-sīlaṃ adhimattāya paññāya paripūritaṃ hoti.

Upa. next tells us how ājīva-pārisuddhi follows Vinaya-saṃvara and how these two in turn follow indriya-saṃvara. Paccaya-sannissita-sīla is the same as indriya-saṃvara-sīla. He again tells us that Vinaya-saṃvara and ājīva-pārisuddhi are included under sīlakkhandha; indriya-saṃvara and Vinaya-saṃvara under samādhikkhandha; and catupaccaya-sannissita-sīla under paññākhandha.

15. Katham sīla-visuddhi samādinnā hoti?

When a bhikkhu has first accepted the jhānadhammas, he should reflect whether he has in himself any of the seven kinds of (lapses).<sup>3</sup> If he sees in himself any Pārājikā offence, he is fallen from bhikkhu-dhamma and he stays only in anupasampanna-sāla.

Former teachers have said, "If he sees that he has transgressed into a Sanghādisesa offence, he should ask pardon by a Sangha-kamma (森事). If he has transgressed other offences he should get himself pardoned by another man. If he finds that he has transgressed into a micchājīva, he should get a pardon appropriate to the case. Thus he should repent: 'I shall not do it again.' [Cf. B. 1. 126, 'na puna evam karissāmī ti.'] He resolves not to make any further transgression. By this sīla-visuddhi, he does good actions again and again, removes evil, and every morning and evening resolves upon the purity of conduct.

<sup>2.</sup> Apparently there seems to be some inaccuracy in this reading of the word saddhā where we should expect sati (2) but all the three editions I have consulted read in the same way. Cf. B. I. 100.

- 16. Kati sīlassa (or rather 行 ācārassa) patiţṭhā? Dve I. 153 diff. sīlassa patiţṭhā:
  - (i) dussilassa ādīnavadassanam,
  - (ii) sīlassa ānisamsa-dassanam.

The explanation shows that it corresponds to B.'s sīlavipattiyā ādīnavadassanam and sīla-sampattiyā ānisamsa-dassanam (I.153) but the delailed enumeration shows that it is not altogether the same.

In the various illustrations of the disadvantages of a man of evil conduct, he gives two similes. He compares this man to a thief in prison who finds no delight in noble things and to a Caṇḍāla who finds no pleasure in a princely throne.<sup>2</sup>

One must guard one's sīla with utmost care, as an ant does its eggs, or a camarī its tail, or a person his only son, or his single eye,<sup>8</sup> or as a magician his body, or a poor man his treasure or a sailor his ship.

All the ways of guarding his sīla are taken recourse to by him. Thus it becomes patitthā for jhāna-samāpatti.

Kikī va andam camarī va vāladhim

CHAPTER III

[Bk. 2.1.4-2.9a.4; Tak. 404b-406c. Cf.Vis. IInd chapter.]

The introductory paragraph telling us why the yogāvacara, after fulfilling the purity of conduct, turns to the 'dhutas' corresponds roughly to B.II.1. Then Upa. tells us that there are thirteen<sup>2</sup> dhutas classified as follows:

- II. 88 Dve dhammā cīvara-paţisaṃyuttā: paṃsukūlikaṃ, tecīvari-kaṃ;
  - pañca dhammā piṇḍpāta-paṭisaṃyuttā: piṇḍpātikaṃ, sapadānacārikaṃ, ekāsanabhojanaṃ (B.'s 'ekāsanikaṃ'), bhojane mattaññutā³ (B.'s patta-piṇḍikaṃ), khalupacchābhattikañ ca.
  - pañca dhammā senāsana-paṭisaṃyuttā: āraññikaṃ, rukkhamūlikaṃ, abbhokāsikaṃ, sosānikaṃ, yathāsanthatikañ ca.

ekam viriya-paţisamyuttam: nesajjikam.

[This corresponds to B.II.88, where we find exactly this same classification.]

Upa. next tells us how each of these dhutas is accepted, although, later also, he tells us the same thing in his treatment of each of the dhutas.

- 1. On this subject see my article 'A fragment of a Tibetan Version of a Lost Indian Work' published in the Proceedings Vol. (pp. 131-135) of the Seventh All-India Oriental Conference, Baroda (1933).
- 2. Mvy.1128-1139 and Chin. Dhs. XXXIV (pp. 31, 118) give a list of twelve dhutangas only. The list in one does not, however, agree with that in the other. The former, as well as Puggala-paññatti (p. 69), omits sapadānacārikanga and pattapindikanga (or bhojane mattañnutā of Vimuttimagga) while the latter omits yathāsanthatikanga and pattapindikanga from the list of B., but both these texts give a new anga, called nāmāntika or nāmatika for pattapindika of B. For the word namataka (or nāmatika or nāmantika) see Cullavagga of V. 11, 1; 19, 1; 27, 1; X. 10, 4; Vin. Comm. explains it as sattha-vethanakam, pilotikakhandam. Also see B.D. pp. 135-36 and the Tibetan Dictionary by S. C. Das, p. 836 under
- phyiñ-pa JC'C: Namata is felt and nāmatikanga is the practice of wearing felt. It should also be noted that the characters used in the Chin. Dhs. differ widely from those used in our text.
- 3. This term is found in the Tibetan version also. See p. 133 of my article referred to above.

1. Kimattham pamsukūlam samādiyati?

He sees disadvantages in seeking his clothing from householders and sees advantages in the acceptance of this practice, which he does by thinking in this way: gahapati-danassa patikkhittattā pamsukūlam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso pamsukūla-samādāne?

The answer roughly corresponds to B.II.21 and some expressions like corabhayena abhayatā, paribhoga-tanhāya-abhāvo can be traced. There are some additions by Upa. like ditthadhamma-sukha-vihāritā and so on.

II. 21 r.a.

II. 15

Katividham pamsukūlam? Of two kinds:

- (i) that which is not owned by any one such as sosānikam, sankāracolam, pāpanikam, rathiyā-colakam, and a cīvara made of clippings picked up, washed, dyed and sewn together.
- (ii) things left over by common people such as clippings of a tailor, pieces eaten up by cattle or mice, (partly) burnt by fire, thrown away by people, coverings over a corpse, or garments of heretics and so on.

Katham samādiyati?

Sace bhikkhu gahapati-dānam paţikkhipati, tena paṃsukūlikam hoti.

Katham bhedo?

Sace bhikkhu gahapatidānam samādiyati, tena pamsukūlikam bhinnam hoti.

2. Katham tecīvarikam samādiyati?

If he has an additional cīvara, he should give it to others, should see ādīnava in keeping it and should see the advantage in possessing only the three civaras. He should think: ajjatagge atireka-cīvarassa paţikkhittattā tecīvarikam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso tecīvarika-samādāne?

The answer roughly agrees with B.II.25 some of the expres- II 25 sions from which can be traced here such as appasamārambhatā, santuţho kāya-parihārikena.

Kāni tīņi cīvarāni? Sanghāţi, Uttarāsangam, Antarāvāsakañ ca. [These names are given in their Chinese transliterations.l

Katham samādānam? Sace bhikkhu atireka-cīvaram na dhāreti.

Katham bhedo? Sace bhikkhu catuttham civaram samādiyati.

3. Katham pindapätikam samādinnam hoti?

The yogāvacara should see the disadvantages in this that if he accept invitations, it would interfere with his work and that he would come into contact with undesirable bhikkhus. Further he should see the advantages, and resolve: ajjatagge nimantana-paţikkhepena piṇḍapātika-dhammaṃ samādiyāmi.

1I. 29 r.a. Ko piṇḍapātikassa ānisaṃso? The answer roughly corresponds to B.II.29. While some expressions from B. like kosajjanimmathanatā, mānappahānaṃ, rasatanhānivāraṇaṃ can clearly be seen, there are others like cātuddisatā (於四方) added. [B. gives this last as one of the advantages of abbhokāsikangaṃ, II.62.]

Katividhā nimantanā?

Katham samādānam?

Katham bhedo?

Upa. mentions three kinds of nimantanā<sup>1</sup>—for food, for going and for meeting —and adds that this practice is accepted by avoiding invitations and violated by accepting them.

4. Katham sapadānacārikam samādinnam hoti?

If he gets excellent food in the houses he visits, he does not go again. He is away from doubtful places (sankitaṭṭhā-nāni). He knows their faults. He also knows the advantages of resolving: ajjatagge a-sapadānacārikaṃ paṭikkhipāmi, sapadānacārikaṃ samādiyāmi.

II. 33 r.a. Ko ānisamso sapadānacārike? The answer corresponds to B. II.33 from which the expressions like avhānānabhinandanā, candūpamatā can be traced here. Upa. also adds many others.

Kim nāma sapadānacārikam?

Kathaṃ samādānaṃ?

Katham bhedo?

When a bhikkhu enters a village for alms, he starts from a house on the extreme border. If he goes from house to house, he fulfills this practice; but if he passes over one house and goes to another, he violates it.

 Cf. SN. 40 Amantanā hoti sahāya-majjhe, vāse thāne gamane cārikāya. 5. Katham ekāsanikam samādiyati?

Ekāsanika means to be far from taking food at each meal at two or more different places. This is practised by good men and is something about which there cannot be any doubt (無疑).

Ko ānisamso ekāsanike? The answer roughly corresponds to B.II.37, some expressions from which like appābādhatā, appātankatā......phāsu-vihāro can be traced here.

Katham ekāsanikassa ) Upa. speaks of the three pariyantas, āsanapariyanta, udakayantas, asanapariyanta, udakapariyanta and bhojana-pariyanta mentioned by B. in II.36. If he plans to sit twice for food, he violates eka-bhojana (一食) which with the exception of liquid medicines is commended by the Buddha.

6. Kathaṃ bhojana-mattaññutā ( 受 節 量 食 ) samādiyati? [Diff. from pattapindikangam of B.II.39ff.]

If he eats and drinks without moderation, he increases his bodily sloth and heaviness, always has greed, and never feels satisfied in his stomach. He knows the disadvantages of this and further knows the advantage of moderation in food which he takes with this resolve: ajjatagge loluppam patikkhipitvā bhojana-mattaññutam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso bhojana-mattaññutāya? [The answer differs from B.II.41.1

II. 41

Moderation in food, not to allow the stomach to indulge in Idesires for food |-- for, eating too much increases diseases and gives no happiness—removes sloth (thinamiddha-panudanam) and is recommended by good people.

When he takes his food and drink he must know how much he needs, and must not take more than an average standard. He must cut off lack of moderation. Otherwise, the practice of this dhutanga is

II. 45 p.a.

Katham khalupacchābhattikam samādiyati? 7.

He cuts off all expectations and is far from atirittabhojana. He knows the disadvantages of this and also sees the advantages of a resolve like this: ajjatagge atiritta-bhojanam paţikkhipāmi, khalu-pacchā-bhattikam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso khalu-pacchā-bhattike?

The answer partly corresponds to B. II. 45, from which pariyesanāya abhāvo can be traced here.

Duvidham [khalu-pacchā-bhattikam]:

aparicchinnāntam (?不 節 邊)—If he receives additional food or gets it by a separate apology he should not eat it again. [Does this correspond to B. II. 43: pavāretvā puna bhojanam kappiyam kāretvā na bhuñjitabbam?

adhitthitantam ( 受 扶 邊 )—When he has taken twenty-one mouthfuls (kabalas) he should not take any more.

Kathaṃ samādānaṃ?

When a mendicant is a khalupacchābhattika, he cuts off atirittabhojana; so, if he takes the latter, he violates the practice.

Katham bhedo?

Katham ārañnikam samādiyati?

He sees the disadvantages of dwelling in a noisy place, where his mind comes into contact with five kinds of impurities (lit. dust B raja) and produces sankilithasukha. If he lives in a noisy place, he is disturbed by the people coming and going. Further he sees the advantages in the practices of an āraññika, when he resolves: ajjatagge gāmantavihāram patikkhipāmi, ārañnikam samādiyāmi.

II. 49 r.a.

Ko araññassa paccanto? The answer roughly corresponds to B. II. 49: pañcadhanusatikam pacchimam.

Katham samādānam? By giving up gāma-majjhe vihāra. Katham bhedo? By resorting to gāma-majjhe vihāra.

9. Katham rukkhamūlikam samādiyati?

He abandons a covered place (channam), does not accumulate or store up, removes tanhā or pariyesanā, and knows their disadvantages. He also sees the advantages of a rukkhamulika and resolves: ajjatagge channam paţikkhipāmi, rukkha-mūlavihāram samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso rukkhmūlike?

The answer corresponds to B.II.58, some expressions from II. 58 which like senāsana-macchera-kammārāmatānam abhāvo, devatāhi sahavāsitā can be found here.

Ke rukkhā sevitabbā? Such trees should be used, that by day time, the shadows of the trees may reach the place occupied by him and such trees as would not shed leaves on his place when it is windv.

Ke rukkhā na sevitabbā? One must keep away from II. 56 dangerous, decayed trees, trees, hollow or eaten up by worms, or trees resorted to by demons or spirits. Cf. B.II.56, where B. different kinds of trees to be avoided wherein he mentions cetiyarukkha.

Katham samādānam? By avoiding covered places.

Katham bhedo? If he stays in covered places, he breaks the practice.

Katham abbhokāsikam samādiyati? 10.

He does not like a place with a roof on, nor does he like to sit under a tree, nor does he like a place where things are stored up. He knows the disadvantages of these and further sees the advantages of an abbhokāsika. He thinks: ajjatagge nivāsam na sādiyāmi, paţikkhipāmi, abbhokāsikam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso abbhokāsikassa?

The answer partly corresponds to B. II. 62, some of the 11. 62 expressions from which like thina-middha-panudanum, migā p.a. viya, nissangatā etc. can be traced here.

Katham samādānam? By resolving: channañ ca rukkhamūlañ ca paţikkhipāmi, abbhokāsikañ ca samādiyāmi.

Katham bhedo? If he stays in a covered place, or under a tree, he violates the practice.

Katham sosānikam samādiyati?

If he resorts very little to places other than susana, then there is little pamāda, and he becomes afraid of evil (pāpa). He knows the disadvantages of resorting to places other than susāna, and the advantage of being a sosānika. He thinks: ajjatagge na-susānam paţikkhipāmi, sosānikam samādiyāmi.

Ko ānisamso sosānikassa samādāne?

The answer to this roughly corresponds to B.II.67, several II. 67 expressions from which can be traced here. For instance, we have marana-satiyā paţilābho, appamāda-vihāritā, kāmarāgavinodanam, amanussānam garubhāvanīyatā.

Katham sosānikam samādinnam hoti? Kattha vasitabbam?

When he goes to a cemetery, he must first note the places where there is constant crying, or constant smoke, or constant fire, and if he wants to stay in the cemetery, he must stay in places other than these.

Katham samācaritabbam? When a bhikkhu stays there, he must not build there any room, nor make any bed, nor should he stay in a place in the direction from which the wind blows, nor in a place against the current of the wind. [There are some details in this connection, which are not found in B.]

Katham samādānam? By abandoning places other than susāna.

Katham bhedo? By living in places other than susana.

12. Katham yathā-santhatikam samādiyati?

He rejoices not in what people are greedy for, and does not bother others so as to make people avoid him. He knows the defects of this kind of life and sees the advantages of a yathā-santhatika. [He resolves]: ajjatagge senāsana-loluppam paṭik-khipāmi, yathā-santhatikam samādiyāmi.

II. 71 diff. Ko ānisaṃso yathāsanthatike? [The answer differs considerably from B.II.71.] One seeks contentment about a dwelling-place, loves a solitary place, cuts off delight in the acceptance of many things, is highly respected by people and so on.

Katham samādānam? By removing greed for a dwelling place.

Katham bhedo? By resorting to a comfortable place.

13. Katham nesajjikam samādiyati?

By knowing the disadvantages of drowsiness and sleep, and knowing the advantages of being a nesajjika. He thinks: ajjatagge seyyam paţikkhipāmi, nesajjikm samādiyāmi.

II.75 diff. Ko ānisamso nesajjike? [The answer differs from B.II.75.]

He cuts off sloth, removes bodily illness, is away from passionate contact, delights in diminishing sleep, has constant solitariness and quiet, and is able to produce jhāna-visesa.

Katham samādānam? By cutting off sleep.

Katham bhedo? If he sleeps, he would be violating the practice.

Now follows a small section on 方便 which purports to enumerate cases of convenience or emergency, when a certain laxity in the observance of these practices may be allowed; as for instance, he may take some extra pieces of cloth as towels, or for bandages of wounds; or, even if he has taken up the practice of a sapadānaoārika, he should avoid elephants or horses that may be coming in his way. Seeing a candāla, he should cover his begging-bowl. 'Following one's ācariya or upajjhāya' is also mentioned as an occasion for exception. He may get up from the place where he is taking his food, when he sees his teacher coming or any guest-mendicants coming, although he has taken up the practice of taking food on one and the same seat only. [B. also has referred to such cases from time to time. See, for instance, II.31.35.1

Under these circumstances, even though these practices are violated, no sin of violation is attached. But no exception is allowed in the cases of a bhojana-mattaññū and a khalupacchābhattika. Also in the case of a nesajjika; although some say that, in this case, an exception may be allowed when a mendicant N.C. has to get up from his seat for clearing his nose.

Upa. next tells us how these dhutas can be condensed into just eight. Khalupacchābhattikatā includes bhojana-mattaññutā and ekāsanikatā, while the practice of an ārañnika includes the practices of a rukkha-mūlika, abbhokāsika and [It should be noted that the details regarding this as given by B. in II.87 are different.] Upa. supports this statement by a quotation from what he calls the Abhidhamma.

II. 87 diff.

These eight can further be reduced to three: the practices of an ārañnika, pamsukūlika, and pindapātika.

Upa. discusses the following questions regarding the dhutas in general:

Kena vuttāni dhutangāni?

Terasa dhutāni Bhagavatā vuttāni, Bhagavatā paññattāni. In continuation of this, Upa. says that we cannot call these dhutas kusala, or akusala, or abyākata. For it is possible for a person of evil disposition not to give up evil thought or evil desires and to produce adhammas and so it will be seen that the dhutangas may not be kusala. Now in Vis. II. 78, 79, B. combats the views of those who say (i) that the dhutangas can

II. 78 combats this view be called kusala, akusala or abyākata; or (ii) that they are kusalattikavinimmutta. Upatissa's view seems to be identical with the latter, which, says Dhammapāla the Commentator, was the view of the adherents of the school of Abhayagiri. [Abhayagirivāsike sandhāyāha. Te hi dhutangam paññattī ti vadanti.]

TI. 83-84

(ii) Dhutassa katividhā dhammā?

Dve dhammā: alobho ca amoho ca. This agrees with B. II. 83, 84. Upa. also gives the quotation from A. iii. 219 in a slightly varied form, while it is merely referred to by B.

(iii) Rāgādicaritesu ko dhutam sevati?

Rāgacarito ca moha-carito ca. Upa. definitely says that the practice of dhutas is not helpful to a dosa-carita. It is positively harmful to him just as a hot drink is harmful to a man who is suffering from the illness of fever. But he also refers to an alternative view that the practices of an āraññika and rukkha-mūlika are appropriate for a dosa-carita, which B. also has mentioned in II. 86 as an alternative view: āraññikanga-rukkha-mūlikangapaṭisevanā vā dosacaritassāpi sappāyā.

N.C.

(iv) Kati dhutāni kāla-pariyantāni?

The three dhutas, those of a rukkha-mūlika, abbhokāsika and sosānika, are restricted to eight months. The Buddha has allowed a sheltered place for the time [of the rainy season] when a place of safety is required.

11. 81-82

- (v) Ko dhuto ca dhutavādo ca?: [Cf. B. II.81-82 where the explanations are quite different.]<sup>2</sup>
  - (a) Dhuto ca dhuta-vādo ca: Arahā ca dhuta-samannāgato ca.
  - (b) Dhuto ca na dhuta-vādo ca: Arahā, dhutangasamādānena pana na samannāgato.

- 2. On the subject-matter of this paragraph as well as of the chapter, also see my article 'Dhutangas' in the Indian Historical Quarterly, March 1937, Vol. XIII, no. 1, pp. 44-51.

(d) Na dhuto ca na dhuta-vādo ca: sekho ca puthujjano ca dhuta-samādānena na samannāgato.

Dhutāni kim-lakkhanāni, kim-rasāni, kim-paccupaţţhā-nāni?

Appicchatā-lakkhaṇāni, santuṭṭhi-rasāni, idamatthitā-paccupaṭṭhānāni.

Or else,

Nilloluppa-lakkhaṇāni, anādīnava-rasāni, aparihāni-pac-cupaṭṭhānāni.

Kāni ādi-majjha-pariyosānāni?

Samādānam ādi, paţisevanā majjho, somanassam anto.

CHAPTER IV

SAMADHI-PARICCHEDO

[Bk. 2.9a.5-2.14a.7; Tak. 406c.-408a. Cf. Vis. III.1-25.]

When the yogāvacara with pure conduct has practised dhutas, he should cultivate samādhi.

Upa., as usual, sets up a number of questions which he answers and thus treats the subject. Here, however, he does not take up the questions in the same order. He changes the order in one place at least. All the questions except the last one, 'Katham samādhi uppādetabbo?' are answered by him in this chapter. The last one is answered in subsequent chapters.

- III. 8
- 1. Ko samādhi? It is the concentration of the mind, already purified, on an object, so that it is not distracted. [Cf. B. III.3] Upa, gives another alternative definition supporting himself by a quotation from the Abhidhamma which is none but the definition of samādhi given in Vibh. 217, Dhs. §§ 11, 15, 24, 287, 570.

He who can hold his thoughts in a perfect, balanced state, like a man who keeps himself well-balanced while carrying the bowl of oil [Cf. S. v. 170 for this simile.], or like the four horses that pull the chariot with equal force.

4. Jhāna-vimokkha-samādhi-samāpattīnam kim nānākaranam?

Jhānan ti paṭhamajjhānādīni cattāri jhānāni.

Vimokkho ti 'ajjhattam rūpasaññī bahiddhā rūpāni passatī' ti ādayo aṭṭha vimokkhā.

Samādhī ti savitakka-savicārādayo tayo samādhayo. Samāpattī ti nava anupubba-samāpattiyo.

[This corresponds to the explanation of these terms in Vbh. 342, 343.]

Upa. also goes into the details of the interpretation of the word jhāna, the first interpretation of which corresponds to B.'s interpretation: ārammaṇa-upanijjhānattā in IV. 119.

- 5. Kati ānisaṃsā? Cattāro: [Cf. B. XI. 120-124, where we have five mentioned, the last of which nirodhānisamsa is not mentioned here.]
  - (i) Ditthadhamma-sukhavihāritā. When a man attains samādhi, he finds delight and experiences pabbajjā-sukha. Upa. also gives a quotation in which the Blessed One is speaking of the days he spent in the state of samādhi, while he was practising the nigantha practices, for seven days and nights.

XI. 120-24 mentions

- (ii) Vipassanāya sukhā kiriyā. When a man's mind is free from nīvaraņas, and when he has attained the pliability of mind by the training of samādhi, he can have a penetrative insight into the khandhas, āyatanas, dhātus, and so on.
- (iii) Abhiññā-sacchikiriyā. One can attain the five miraculous powers of iddhividha, dibbasota, paracittavijānanā, pubbenivāsānussati, and dibbacakkhu. [See Chapter Nine, p. 86]
- (iv) Bhava-sampatti [corresponding to bhava-visesa of B. XI.123]. The man who has attained samādhi does not fall back from it [Cf. samādhimhā na parihāyati in B. XI. 123], but does attain a fruit. He attains, if he does not become an asebha, rūpārūpa-bhava-visesa, as the Blessed One has said: Pathamam jhānam parittam bhāvetvā Brahma-pārisajjatam pāpuņāti.

- 1. Is this a correct representation? Cf. M. i. 94 (Sutta no. 14), where the Buddha is represented as saying to the Niganthas that he could live in a state of samādhi even for seven days.
  - 2. 無喜樂. The meaning is not quite clear.
- 3. I am not sure about the accuracy of the eight dhammas given here, as the sense is likely to change with a different punctuation.

Further, one has to properly understand the kammaṭṭhāna. He should understand whether the ārammaṇa is hīna, majjhima or paṇīta.

Thus one should know that there are many kinds of samādhis, but that all of them are included under four.

CHAPTER V

KALYANA-MITTA-PARIYESANA

[Bk. 2.14a.8-2.19.3 (end of Bk.2); Tak. 408a-409b. Cf. Vis. III.61-73.]

Upa. takes up the last of the questions (No. 10) set up by him in the last chapter: Katham samādhi uppādetabbo?

The beginner in the practice of meditation (ādikammika), wishing to produce jhāna-samādhi, should seek the best kalyāṇa-mitta. For, he would become his guide, friend and relative taking every possible care of him. If he does not find such a friend, he becomes like an elephant without a goad, wandering alone, without anybody to direct, wherever it pleases him. This kalyāṇamitta is compared by Upa. to a skilful cart-driver, helmsman, doctor, father, mother or a teacher.

Who is  $parama-kaly\bar{a}$ na-mitta? One should search for a man who is well-versed in the Sutta, Abhidhamma and Vinaya, well-versed in understanding different kinds of kamma (? 業 ), who has attained the  $kusala-jh\bar{a}na-abhi\tilde{n}\tilde{n}a$  and who has an insight into the Four Truths.

If he does not find such a man, he should take recourse to one who is endowed with the seven qualities which are exactly the same as are mentioned in the following stanza of B.III.61:

Piyo garu bhāvanīyo vattā ca vacanakkhamo gambhīrañ ca katham kattā no ca'ṭṭhāne nivesaye.

Upa. comments on all the seven qualities mentioned here. While commenting on the last phrase: no ca'tthāne nivesaye, Upa. mentions kula, ñāti, āvāsa, kamma, gaṇa and gantha as the atthānas which should be avoided. [These are only six of the ten palibodhas mentioned by B. in III.29.] Such a man he should seek.

Now comes the next question as to how he should seek such a man.

Katham pariyesitabbo? If he knows that such and such a person living in such and such a place has the necessary qualifications and is highly respected, and if he be a jhānā-cariya, he should go to him. If he does not personally know of such a person, he should make inquiries with others about such a man, his country, his residence, his jhānācariya, and so on, and then go to him and express his wish.

The text goes on giving various details as to how he should behave while he is waiting upon his teacher. In this connection, there is one sentence which gives a very appropriate simile to express the behavior of this man while he is living with his teacher. 'He should not have any feelings of contempt, but, on the contrary, like a newly-married bride going to wait upon her father-in-law, and mother-in-law, should have hiri and ottappa and should receive instructions.'

If he sees a teacher of the Vinaya or of the Abhidhamma, or of the dhutas, he should try to learn things about them from him. If he sees a jhānācariya coming, and even if he be younger than himself, he should take his begging-bowl and clothes from his hand [& a mark of respect for him], and wait upon him. As soon as he finds a suitable opportunity, he should express his intention to him. He should abide by the instruction given to him.

The chapter closes with a number of gathas attributed to the Buddha, summarising what one should avoid and what one should practise.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER VI

CARIYA-PARICCHEDO

[Bk. 3.1.4-3.6.9; Tak. 409b-411a. Cf. Vis. III.74-102.]

The ācariya observing the behavior of his pupil for several days should prescribe a kammaṭṭhāna suitable to his disposition [cariyā 行]

There are fourteen kinds of  $cariy\bar{a}$ :

III 74 refers to fourteen cariyās. Rāgā-cariyā
 Dosa-cariyā
 Moha-carīyā
 Saddhā-cariyā
 Buddhi-cariyā
 Vitakka-cariyā
 IB. in III. 74 refers to the fourteen cariyās but accepts only six, corresponding to the first six of these.

۴,

- 7. Rāga-dosa-cariyā
- 8. Rāga-moha-cariyā
- 9. Dosa-moha-cariyā
- 10. Sama-bhāga-cariyā<sup>1</sup> (等分行): rāga, dosa, and moha taken equally together.
- 11. Saddhā-buddhi-cariyā
- 12. Saddhā-vitakka-cariyā
- 13. Buddhi-vitakka-cariyā
- 14. Sama-bhāga-cariyā (等 分 行); saddhā, buddhi, and vitakka taken equally together.

Further, several other cases may be made through  $tanh\bar{a}$ ,  $ditthi^2$  and  $m\bar{a}na^2$  [cf. B.III. 78] but they may not be considerd as quite distinct in meaning. From these fourteen cariyas, we get fourteen classes of men such as  $r\bar{a}ga\text{-}carita$ , dosa-carita and so on.

These fourteen can be reduced to seven. Nos. 1 and 4 can become one and the same. So also, Nos. 2 and 5, 3 and 6, 7 and 11, 8 and 12, 9 and 13, and 10 and 14.

- 1. Cf. samabhāgacarita of Peţ. VII. p. 157 (Bur. ed. v. 190); also 'Tattha rāga-dosa-moha-samabhāgacaritassa puggalassa visesabhāgiyam jhānam hoti' in Peţ. VII. p. 162 (Bur. ed. p. 192).
- 2. Cf. Sphuţārthābhidharmakośavyākhyā (Bibl. Buddhica XXI) p. 55, (comment on I. 26) where we have a list of twelve kinds of people possessing different cariyās including these two.

Why is it so? The reasons given are in substantial agree- III. 75-77 ment with those given by B. in Vis. III. 75-77, and many of the many sensentences from those paragraphs can be traced here word for word.

tences id.

Of these seven classes of men, nos. 1, 2 and 7 have khippā patipadā, while nos. 3, 8 and 9, and the class made of nos. 10 and 14 have dandhā paţipadā. These seven classes can further be reduced to three, raga-carita, dosa-carita and moha-carita, in so far as their mula-kilesa (本質惱) is concerned.

The following questions about these cariyas are set up and answered:

- · (i) Etā tisso cariyā kinnidānā? The answer is [Cf. III. 79-82.1:
  - (a) Pubbāciņņa-nidānā: pubbe kira itthappayogasubhakammabahulo.......(almost word for word almost id. the same as in B. III.80.)

(b) Dhātu-nidānā: The same as B. III.81, the first B. refers half of which refers to dhatus.

(c) Dosa-nidānā: (x) semhādhiko rāgacarito, pittādhiko dosa-carito, vātādhiko moha-carito. Or, it refers to is said: (β) semhādhiko moha-corito, vātādhiko in III. 81.  $r\bar{a}ga$ -carito.

to these views. s.d. but B. this view

[In Vis. III.81, B. refers to a view which corresponds to this view, except that he points out in III, 82, that according to this view, only raga and moha are explained, while in this text, we find the mention of all the three, raga, dosa and moha. He also points out that the two ( $\alpha$  and  $\beta$ ) exactly opposite views about the raga-carita and moha-carita make the position of those who hold this view untenable. B. ascribes this view to 'Ekacce' which Dhammapala in his comment explains follows: 'Ekacce' ti Upatissattheram sandhāya āha.

Vimuttimagge tathā vuttam', (p. 113 Burmese edition.1)]

(ii) Katham ca jānitabbam ayam puggalo rāgacarito, ayam dosacarito, ayam moha-carito ti?

The answer is that all these things can be known in seven ways:

- (a) Arammanato (以事). This substantially agrees III. 94. with dassanādito of B. III. 94.
- 1. Of P. G. Mundyne Pitaka Press 1909; but Zabu Meit Swe Press ed. (1913) p. 105; Sinhalese edition p. 96.

III. 95 diff. (b) Kilesato. This corresponds to dhammappavattito of B. III. 95; but the names of the dhammas ascribed to each of the three classes of men do not always agree. Upa. mentions only five evil dhammas for each of these three classes of men, while B. mentions several dhammas for each of the six classes he accepts.

III. 88, 91, 93.

- (c) Gamanato. This substantially agrees with B. III. 88, excepting the quotation from the Commentary on the Māgandiya-sutta to which there is nothing corresponding in this text.
- (d) Cīvara-pāpuraṇato. This gives only a general description of the nature of clothes liked by each of these three kinds of men.
- (e) Bhojanato. Substantially agrees with B. III. 93.
- (f) Kiccato. Substantially agrees with B. III. 91.
- (g) Seyyādito. Substanally agrees with B.III. 91 and a part of iriyāpathato in III. 88.
- (iii) Katham cīvaram pārupati, bhojanam bhuñjati, katham assa senāsanam, gocaro, iriyāpatho ca? The answer follows seriatim:
  - (a) Cīvara-samādānam. This corresponds to the passage regarding nivāsana-pāpurana and ārammana in B. III. 97-101.
  - (b) Bhojanāhāra. This roughly corresponds to the remarks on yāgubhatta-khajjaka in B. III. 97, 100.
  - (c) Senāsana. This corresponds to the remarks on senā-sana in B. III. 97, 99. It is interesting to note a remark of Upa. that a mohacarita should stay in the vicinity of his ācariya.
  - (d) Gocara. This roughly corresponds to the remarks on bhikkhācāramagga and bhikkhācāra-gāma in B. III. 97-100. There is another interesting remark made by Upa. that a rāgacarita should go into the village facing the sun, a dosacarita with his back towards the sun, and a mohacarita any way he pleases.
  - (e) Iriyāpatha. Upa. tells us what different postures are resorted to by the three classes of men. He mentions that a dosacarita is given more to sitting and lying, while the mohacarita to walking.

B. III. 97-100 Upa. adds pakinnakakathā.

A rāgacarita believes in agreeable objects, a dosacarita in N.C. disagreeable ones, and a mohacarita sees nothing in which he can believe. A rāgacarita is like a slave, a dosacarita like a master, and a mohacarita like poison. A rāgacarita loves colour (vaṇṇa), a dosacarita loves finding fault, and a mohacarita loves idleness.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1.</sup> This chapter on the whole reveals a remarkably close agreement between Vis. and Vim., perhaps because as B. has said in III. 96, both of them are following the same ācariya-mata [kevalam ācariya-matānusārena vuttam]. There are several passages which are found word for word in both the texts.

CHAPTER VII

KAMMATTHANA-PARICCHEDO

[Bk. 3.6.10-3.11a-2; Tak. 411a-412b. Cf. Vis. III.105-121.]

III. 105 enumerates forty kammaţţānas. Having observed the  $cariy\bar{a}$  of his pupil, the  $\bar{a}cariya$  should prescribe the thirty-eight kammatthānus and also instruct him in two [more], as would befit his  $cariy\bar{a}$ . Which are the thirty-eight kammatthānus?

- 1-10 Dasa kasiņā: pathavē, āpo, tejo, vāyo, nēla, pēta, lohita, odāta, ākāsāyatana and viññāņāyatana.
- 11-20 Dasa asubhā: uddhumātaka, vinīlaka, vipubbaka, vicchiddaka, vikkhāyitaka, vikkhittaka, hatavikkhittaka, lohitaka, pūļavaka, and aṭṭhika.
- 21-30 Dasa anussatiyo: Buddhānussati, dhammānussati, sanghānussati, sīlānussati, cāgānussati, devatānussati, maraņasati, kāyagatāsati, ānāpānasati, and upasamānussati.
- 31-34 Cattāri appamāņa-cittāni [or, catasso appamaññā, corresponding to B's. brahmavihārā]: mettā, karuņā, muditā and upekkhā.
- 35 Catudhātuvavatthānam
- 36 Ahāre paţikkūlasaññā
- 37 Akiñcaññāyatanam
- 38 Nevasaññā-nāsaññāyatanaṃ

[Mark the change in the order from that in Vis. III.105, according to which the order of these kammatthānas after no. 34, would be 9, 10, 37, 38, 36, 35 of those given in this list, while āloka-kasina and paricchinnākāsa-kasina are given by B. as the last two of the kasinas.]

1. Upa. does not include in this list āloka-kasiņa and paricçhinnākāsa kasiņa given by B., although it is clear that he knew these two. He includes them in the other two mentioned above. Besides, when he comes to the detailed treatment of these kamaṭṭhānas he does mention these two and gives a detailed treatment of them. See pp. 58, 59. It is, however, clear that there was a classification, even in the old Pali texts, of thirty-

One should know these thirty-eight kammatthanas well in III. 103 the following nine ways [B. mentions ten ways, of which ten ways. the first sankhātaniddesato may as well be said to have been given in the enumeration above.

- (i) Jhānato. This corresponds to upacārappanāvahato and jhānappabhedato of B. III.106-107, but differs in this that Upa. adds a class of catukka-pañcakajjhāna to which he ascribes the first eight kasinas and anapanasati, adds a class of aruppas to which he ascribes nos. 9, 10, 37, 38 of the list given above, and that he ascribes only upekkhā (of the appamaññās) to the catukkajjhānika class.
- (ii) Samatikkamato:

III. 108 diff.

- (a) Rūpasamatikkama: excepting the āruppa kasinas (nos. 9 and 10 from the above list) in the remaining eight kasinas only; in the remaining thirty there is no rūpasamatikkama.
- (b) Arammana-samatikkama is seen in the three kammatthanas only, the two aruppakasinas and in the ākiñcaññāyatana; not in the remaining thirty-five.
- (c) Saññā-vedanā-samatikkama in no. 38 only, and not in the remaining. [B. mentions in III 108: Dve samatikkamā:

angasamatikkamo ca ārammaņasamatikkamo

(iii) Vaddhanato. This corresponds to vaddhanavaddhanato III. 109-16. of B. III.109-116, but there is an important difference. According to Upa. the nimitta of the ten kasinas and the four appamānacittāni should be developed and the remaining should not be developed. vehemently against developing the nimitta of the brahmavihāras which correspond to the four appamāņacittas. [See B. III.113-114].

B. combats this view.

eight kammatthanas. See Dhs. para 203, Atthasalini pp. 158, 168, 187. B. himself_refers to it in Vis. VI. 56 in these words: Pāliyam hi vibhattaatthatimsārammanesu evarūpam bheravārammanam nāma natthi. The last two of the kasinas as mentioned in this list are found in M. ii. 14-15, Ps. i. 6, and Abhk. VIII. 36a; also Netti p. 89. See MCm. ii. 236: atthatimsarammanesu cittaruciyam kammatthanam gahetva. Also cf. MCm. i. 1954 ii. 358.

III. 120 diff. (iv) Paccayato. This corresponds to B. III.120 which goes into more details than this text. Nine kammatthānas, the first eight kasiņas and the paricchinnākāsa-kasiņa, become the paccaya of the abhiñnās and the remaining thirty do not become.

Excluding the last no. 38, the remaining thirty-seven become the paccaya of vipassanā. Nevasaññānāsaññāyatana does not become. [B. does not agree with

  (v) Arammanato:
  - (a) Paṭibhāgārammaṇāni—twenty-one: excluding viññāṇakasiṇa, the remaining nine kasiṇas, the ten asubhas, ānāpānasati and kāyagatāssati.

    [According to B. they are twenty-two, and he inserts the ten kasiṇas according to his enumeration.]
  - (b) Sabhāvadhammārammaņāni—twelve: viññāṇakasiṇa, nevasaññānāsaññāyatana, and the ten which bring about jhānūpacāras.<sup>3</sup>
  - (c) Paţibhāgārammaṇāni sabhāvārammaṇānī ti vā na vattabbāni—five: the four appamāṇacittāni and ākiñcaññāyatana. [B. has six adding ākāsānañcāyatana.]

There seems to be a long digression here giving the sixteen kinds of ārammaṇas and the allocation of the different kammaṭthānas to each of these ārammaṇas. [cf. B. XIII. 105 where twelve ārammaṇas are mentioned based upon the four triads of them given in Dhs. p. 2.]

N.C.

- (vi) Visesato (為勝). Upa. tells us here the special distinctive character of some of these kammatthānas. For instance, the appamāṇa cittas have their special character in that they are faultless, or that catudhātuvavatthāna is called paññāvisesa because it discerns the emptiness (suññatā) of things.
- 1. Apparently from the two additional kammatthanas.
- 2. Also Cf. B. XVII. 75.
- 3. These seem to correspond to B.'s eight anussatis (excluding ānāpāna and kāyagatā from the ten) and āhāre paţikkūla-saññā and catudhātuvavatthāna. See B. III. 106.

- (vii) Bhūmito. This substantially agrees with B. III. 118, except that this text uses the word rūpaloka instead of brahmaloka, and that it does not have any sentence corresponding to manussesu sabbāni pi pavattanti.
- (viii) Gahanato. Agrees with B. III. 119, except that Upa. includes kāyagatāsati under sutena.
  - (ix) Rāgacaritādito. [N. C. for the first half.]

A raga-carita should not practise the four appa- N.O. māna cittas, because they are the subhanimitta. For a rāgacarita, subhasaññā is not proper, just as fatty or oily things are not good for a man who has a preponderence of phlegm (semha) in his humors. dosacarita should not practise the ten asubhas because they are not suitable to him, just as a hot drink is not suitable to a man who has a preponderence of bile (pitta) in his humors. A mohacarita whose understanding is not developed may not allow himself to practise any kiammatthana, because he does not know the proper means (upāyā 方便). If he does not know the proper means, his efforts are fruitless. He would be like a man who rides an elephant without a goad.

A ragacarita should practise asubhasaññas and III. 121 kāyagatā sati which are, so to say, proper antidotes against rāga. A dosacarita should practise the four appamāna cittas which are an antidote for dosa, or should practise the vanna-kasinas, because they are agreeable to his mind. [For this and the remaining part under this heading, see B. III. 121.1 A saddhācarita should practise the six satitthanani beginning with Buddhanussati, because saddhā makes one settled or steady [定]. A buddhicarita should practise oatudhātuvavatthāna, āhāre patikkūlassññā, maranasati and upasamānussati because they are profound. further, a buddhicarita has no obstacle in any kammatthāna, A vitakkacarita should practise ānāpānasati, because it cuts off vitakkas. A mohacarita should, with faith, ask about and hear about the Dhamma, have reverence for it and should live with his teacher and develop his own understanding.

Out of these thirty-eight kammatthanas, one may practise, when one likes, maranasati and catudhatuvavathana, which are the best.

The chapter concludes with the following paragraph to which there does not appear to be anything corresponding in B.

N.O.

A rāgacarita with a dull intellect (mudindriya) should practise asubhānupassanās, while he who is endowed with a sharp intellect should practise satitṭhānas, and thus remove rāga. A dosacarita with a dull intellect should practise the four appamāṇa cittas, while one with a sharp intellect should develop his insight and thus remove dosa. A mohacarita with no intellect (anindriya) should not practise any kammaṭṭhāna, while one with an average intellect should develop ānāpānasati for removing vitakka. [cf. B. III. 121: mohacaritassa vitakka-caritassa ca ekam ānāpānasatikammatṭhānam eva.]

[KAMMA-DVARA(?)]

PART ONE

[1-10 KASINA]

[ Bk. 4. 1. 4-4. 20. 10 (end of the Bk. 4); Tak. 411b-417c. Cf. Vis. IV. 21-138]

1. PAŢĦAVI-KASIŅA.

Upa. as usual sets up a number of questions which he answers one after another. He explains the meaning of the word paṭhavī-kasiṇa and tells us about its lakkhaṇa, rasa, padaṭṭhāna and ānisaṃsas, which last agree very slightly with those mentioned in B. V. 28.

He goes on to discuss the two kinds of paṭhavī, natural and artificial (akata and kata of B. IV. 22). The former (akata) is not good for a yogāvacara because the paṭibhāga-nimitta will not be produced from it. The latter is of four different colours white, black², red and of dawn-colour (aruṇa-vaṇṇa 明 色). Of these one should choose that of the dawn-colour, for if he chooses other colours, it would mean he is practising vannakasina.

A man who has already had practice in jhānas will soon have paṭibhāganimitta. But a new man should make a maṇḍala, circular, four-sided or three-sided, in a quiet place, a place of worship, a store-house or under a tree. That place should neither be too dark, nor have too much light. It should be away from non-human beings (amanussa 對人). This maṇḍala may either be on a piece of cloth, or on a board of wood or on a partition-wall. Upa. here remarks, that although it may be

B. does not speak of these shapes.

- 1. Prof. Nagai translates 行 問 as 'basis of action'. Apparently this seems to be used in the same sense as kammatthāna (行 處) It is, however, difficult to see why Upa. uses the former Chinese expression for the latter used in the preceding chapter.
  - 2. B. has the word pita, yellow (IV. 24).

permissible to have the different kinds of mandala, circular and so on, or on a piece of cloth and so on, still former teachers consider a circular one, and that too on the earth, as the best. He also goes into some more details as to how he should take a compass and make a circle and then prepare a mandala out of wet earth. It should be of the size of a winnowing-basket or a water-bowl (suppamattam vā sarāvamattam vā) as B. quotes in IV. 22 from some old source.

IV. 22

Kathaṃ paṭhavīdhammo¹ (?) bhāvetabbo?

IV. 27

If a man wishes to practise upon the pathavī-kasiṇa, he must first reflect upon the disadvantages of wordly pleasures (kāmesu ādīnava) and the advantages of nekkhamma (出 離). To show the disadvantages of wordly pleasures Upa. gives a number of similes, taken from Majjhima 22nd sutta, which B. merely indicates by saying: appassādā kāmā ti ādinā nayena. [B. IV. 27.].

Upa. interprets the word nekkhamma in two ways: first, it means to leave home and then to practise kusala; or it means to be away from the desires of sense. He also shows in a detailed manner the contrast between kāma and nekkhamma.

When the yogāvacara has seen the disadvantages of worldly pleasures and the advantages of nekkhamma, he should see what he should do and what he should not do. He should be moderate in food, remove idleness, take a seat after washing his hands and feet, and reflect upon the Enlightenment of the Buddha, upon the Dhamma and the Sangha. He should place his seat (āsana 坐具) at a distance equal to the length of a yoke (yuga not be provided) from the mandala, sit cross-legged with his body erect, and mindfulness alert, and look at the mandala with his eyes half open.

In three ways he takes the nimitta:

IV. 28

- (i) Samena ummīlanena. [This corresponds to B. IV. 28 and substantially agrees with it.]
- 1. 幽 浅 .

(ii) Upāyehi. Upa. gives four kinds of upāyas or means N.C. to reflect properly so as to produce the nimitta. If the nimitta is disappearing he thinks that there is something wrong with himself. If he sees only a small nimitta or sees only half of the mandala, he should see the mandala complete and without any deficiency. When he thus sees it, he may then remain indifferent.

(iii) Vikkhepappahānena. By keeping his mind free from IV. 66-72. any distraction in four ways. He should not allow the balance of his mind to be disturbed by overstrenuous work, or by excessive elation of the mind, nor should he allow his mind to sink into lethargy or depression. [Cf. B. IV. 66-72, where B. illustrates this idea with various similes. Upa. gives none of them.

Upa. then speaks of the two kinds of nimittas, uggahanimitta and patibhāga-nimitta. The former is a kind of  $sa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}\tilde{a}$  that arises out of the mandala and the latter arises out of the former. While explaining the word nimitta, Upa. says that the patibhaga-nimitta is merely an image of thought (saññā-patibimba).

The yogāvacara should guard the nimitta in three ways:

(i) akusalappahānena, (ii) kusalabhāvanāya, and (iii) IV 35-41 niccasevanāya. He explains these terms. [Explanation of P.a. (i) and (ii) seems to correspond to a few details given in B. IV. 35-41.1

Ko jhānūpacāro? Kā appņā? Kim tesam nānākaraņam?

Upa. goes into far more details than B. He gives several similes to show the distinction between the two, in addition to the simile given by B. in IV. 33 of a young child (daharakumāra) to whom the upacārajjhāna is compared.

IV. 33

When one has attained upacāra or appaņā, one may develop the kasina gradually, inch by inch, until it is spread over the whole earth. [This portion agrees in thought, though not in expressions, with B.IV.126-27.1

IV. 126-127

When the yogāvacara has attained upacāra and is not able to produce appaņā, he should try to produce it by these two means:

IV. 42-65

(i) By the practice of the ten ways and means that would help him to reach the appaņā. [These ten are the same ten ways mentioned and explained by B. in IV. 42, and IV. 43-65, respectively, with this slight difference that Upa. adds one, anassādatā after cittam nigganhāti and puts asamāhita-puggala-parivajjanato and samāhita-puggala-sevanato into one. Thus he has the same number ten.]

N.C.

(ii) By a strong resolve (以受 持). When he has understood the ten dhammas mentioned just above, he enters a solitary place, knows his nimitta thoroughly, attains mastery over what he has already attained. His mind feels joy, is at ease, and with a firm resolution is freed from kilesas. It accomplishes one dhamma-rasa.

With this special distinction his mind gets the means for the appaņā and in no long time he reaches it.

He attains the first jhāna which is described in almost the same words as those in B. IV.79:

IV. 79

Vivicc' eva kāmehi vivicca akusalehi dhammehi savitakkam savicāram vivekajam pītisukham paṭhamam jhānam upasampajja viharati.

This is the advantage of the pathavi-kasina.

Upa. comments on this whole passage and his comment is much more elaborate as he goes into many more details than B.

He gives the various kinds of vivekas, and while explaining the word  $k\bar{a}ma$  gives the two divisions of  $vatthu-k\bar{a}ma$  and  $kilesa-k\bar{a}ma$  which he explains in general agreement with B., but he differs considerably in details. In this connection, Upa. refers to a book called 三 藏, (lit. three boxes, three piṭakas) from which he gives a quotation which purports to say: Alobhassa pāripūriyā kāmehi viveko sampajati, adosassa.....amohassa pāripūriyā akusalehi dhammehi viveko sampajjati.

IV. 89-90

While captaining the distinction between vitakka and vicāra, Upa. gives several similes in addition to those of ghaṇṭābhighāta and ghaṇṭānurava, pakkhavikkhepa and paribbhamana, given by B. in IV. 89-90. Upa. here again quotes  $\equiv$  which purports to show that vitakka is the first application of the mind to the object of its thought, like seeing a person from a N.C. distance but not being able to recognize whether it is a man or woman.\(^1\) Upa. also adds another interesting simile, among several others, in which he compares vitakka to a strong man muttering a sutta to himself, while  $vic\bar{a}ra$  is like pondering over the meaning of the sutta. At the close of his remarks on this subject, Upa. says that vitakka is equivalent to  $nirutti-patisambhid\bar{a}$ , and  $patibh\bar{a}va-patisambhid\bar{a}$ , while  $vic\bar{a}ra$  is equivalent to  $attha-patisambhid\bar{a}$  and  $dhamma-patisambhid\bar{a}$ .\(^2\)

While explaining the word  $p\bar{\imath}ti$ , in addition to the fivefold classification given by B. in IV. 94—the explanation of which, however, as given by Upa. is not the same as that of B.—Upa. gives another sixfold division as follows:

IV. 94

- (i) Kāmato jātā, (ii) saddhāya jātā, (iii) akukkuccato jātā,
   (iv) vivekato jātā, (v) samādhito jātā, and lastly (vi) N.C. bojjhangato jātā. Similarly, while explaining the word sukha, he gives five kinds of sukha:
- (i) Hetu-sukha, (ii) sambhāra-sukha, (iii) viveka-sukha,
   (iv) nirupakkilesa-sukha, and finally (v) vedanā-su-N.C.
   kha.

While explaining the distinction between  $p\bar{\imath}ti$  and sukha, Upa. goes into many more points of distinction than those given by B. but in general purport his explanation agrees with that given by B. in IV. 100.

Upa. further continues the description of the first trance: Pañcangavippahīnaṃ, pañcangasamannāgataṃ, tividhakalyā-nam, dasalakkhanasampannam, pañcavēsati-guṇābhiyuttam. [Cf. B. IV. 79, where B. has nothing corresponding to the last adjective.]

While explaining the word pañcangavippahīnam he enumerates the five nīvaraṇas and while explaining the word middha, Upa. goes into a discussion which shows the attitude of the school of Upa. with regard to middha<sup>1</sup>, which is entirely opposed to the attitude of B. and his school to the same nīvaraṇa.

Upa. gives three kinds of middha: āhāraja, utuja, and cittaja, of which only the last he considers as nīvaraņa, while the other two are possible even in an Arhat.2 To support gives the authoritative statement of his view. he Anuruddha, who is reported to have said that fiftyfive years had elapsed since he had destroyed the asavas and attained a state where there was no middha produced from citta, but it was only twenty-five years since he had destroyed middha produced from āhāra and utu.3 Upa, further says that although middha is a rūpadhamma, it is still a cetasika upakkilesa, because rūpa is something that defiles the mind. Although middha is a kāyika dhamma and thīna a cetasika dhamma, they are considered as one nivarana because they have the same arammana and the same lakkhana in that they are identical with fatigue and exhaustion.

Upa. gives four kinds of vicikicchā. He also discusses the point as to why the nīvaraṇas are just five.

While commenting on the expression pañcangasamannāgataṃ, he gives the five angas, vitakka, vicāra, pīti, sukha and ekaggatā. Just as we cannot have a cart without its different parts, or an army without its sub-divisions, so also we cannot have a jhāna without these angas. They are five because these five include all others, and because they are just the opposite of the nīvaraṇas which are only five. In this connection Upa. IV. 86 gives another quotation from  $\Xi$  , which exactly corres- quotation ponds to the quotation from Petaka given by B. in IV.86. It Petaka. is word for word the same: Samādhi kāmacchandassa paţipakkho, pīti byāpādassa, vitakko thīnamiddhassa, sukham uddhaccakukkuccassa, vicāro vicikicchāya,

Commenting on tividha-kalyāṇa, Upa. gives three kinds IV. 111-113 of kalyanas, adi-kalyana, majjhe-kalyana, and pariyosanakalyāna and about them he further remarks:

(i) Patipadāvisuddhi ādi—explained as sasambhāriko up- IV. 113-114 refers to this

- (ii) Upekkhānubrūhanā majjhe—explained as appaņā.
- (iii) Sampahamsanā pariyosānam—explained as paccavekkhanā.2

In his comment on dasalakkhana-sampannam, Upa. gives the 1V. 111-113 same lakkhanas as in the quotations from Ps. i. 167-168, given in B.IV. 111-113, except that Upa. uses vivekapatipannam instead of samathapatipannam in B.IV. 112. While commenting on pañcavisatiguṇābhiyuttam he gives the following twenty-five gunas:

Vitakka, vicāra, pīti, sukha, ekaggatā; saddhā, sati, viriya, N.C. samādhi, paññā; ādi, majjha, anta; sankhepa-sangaha ( 斂 攝 ), bhāvanā, viveka, nissaya, sangaha (攝受), anunaya (?從); vipassanā; sevanā, bala, vimutti, visuddhi, and paramavisuddha-yoga-siddhi-vihāra (? 最 勝 清 淨 修 成 住 ).

To show the nature of this trance that it is a dibbavihāra, NO surpassing the human, produced from viveka and abiding in pīti and sukha, Upa. gives a quotation from M.i.276 in which the Buddha is represented to have given the following simile:

Seyyathā pi, bhikkhave, dakkho nahāpako vā nahāpakantevāsī vā...vivekajena pītisukhena apphutam hoti.

Upa. also gives the application of the simile to the ytagracara N.C. and his trance. He further says that this trance is of three

1. Lit. ekaggatā ( - 1) is used for samādhi. I have not yet been able to trace this quotation in the Petakopadesa. Also see DhsCm. 165.

2. This passage is very important to determine the relation between the Vim. and the Vis. as exactly this very interpretation, word for word, of these three terms is referred to by B. and he ascribed the same to eke (IV. 114). Dhamapāla in his comment on the word eke explains that the reference is to Abhayagirivāsino. [Burmese edition, p. 159] kinds, paritta, majjhima and paṇīta. He who cultivates the first of these is born, at the end of his life, among the gods who may be in the circle of Brahmā,¹ and his life-period there is limited to one third of a kappa. One who cultivates the second of these is born among Brahma gods, where the life-period is limited to one half of a kappa. If one cultivates the last of these, then one is born among the Mahābrahmas, where the life-period is one kappa.²

The advantage of being born among the Brahmā-gods is of four kinds:

- (i) Hānabhāgiya: like a man of dull faculties (mudindriya) who is careless. Upa. also gives other alternative explanations of this and discusses why one falls from the position once attained.
- (ii) Thitibhāgiya: like a man of dull faculties, who becomes careful and contemplates upon the Dhamma.
- (iii) Visesabhāgiya: like a man of keen faculties (tikkhindriya) who is careful and can attain the second trance when he likes.
- (iv) Nibbedhabhāgiya: like a man of keen faculties, who is careful and attains when he likes vipassanā, pursues thoughts of nibbidā and virāga.

N.C.

This seems to be the equivalent of Brahma-pārisajjas. See Abhs.
 Chap. V. para. 6.

[KAMMA-DVARA (?)]

PART TWO

[Bk.5.1.4-5.23.8; (end of Bk. five). Tak. 418a-424a. Cf. Vis. IV.139-V.26.]

The yogāvacara wishing to enter the second trance thinks of the disadvantages of the first trance and the advantages of the second. But he has first to attain mastery over the first trance. For, if he has not mastered the first trance, not only will he not be able to enter the second trance, but he will fall back even from the first. To illustrate this, Upa. like B. (IV. 130), gives the famous simile of pabbateyyā gāvī, the mountaincow, and shows its application also.

When the yogavacara has thus attained mastery2 over the first trance, he tries for the second, thinking of vitakka and vicāra as gross, and in no long time he attains the second trance. Upa., like B., follows Vibhanga 245, in the description of the second Vitakkavicārānam vūpasamā ajjhattam sampasādanam cetaso ekodibhāvam avitakkam avicāram samādhijam IV. 139 pītisukham dutiyam jhānam.

Upa.'s comment on the words in this passage does not always agree with that of B. in its details, although in general spirit it agrees.

The description of the second trance is further continued: duvanga-vippahīnam, duvanga(?)-samannāgatam,3 tividha- IV. 149 kalyāņam, dasalakkhaņa-sampannam, tevīsati genābhiyuttam.

- 1. A. iv. 418-19.
- 2. Upa. does not mention the five kinds given by B. in IV. 131-137.
- 3. I fail to see why we have here the mention of two angas only. Vbh. 258 mentions four, sampasāda, pīti, sukha, and cittassa ekaggatā. See also Abhk. VIII. 7-8 which gives the same four angas in the second trance. Even Upa. himself mentions elsewhere (5.2.10) four as the number of angas for this trance. Petakopdesa VII. 155, VII. 206 (Burmese printed ed. pp. 190, 213) also mentions these four angas.

Upa. does not explain the words in this passage. There is nothing in B. corresponding to the word tevisati-guṇābhiyuttaṃ. This second trance is further illustrated by the following simile from M.i. 276-77.

N.O.

Seyyathā pi, bhikkhave, udakarahado ubbhidodako etc. The passage here omits some details of expressions. Here also the application of the simile follows. This trance also is of three kinds, paritta, majjhima, paṇīta, leading respectively to birth among the Parittābhā, Appamāṇābhā and Abhassarā gods, where the life-period is limited to two, four and eight kappas respectively.

Later after acquiring mastery over the second trance, the yogāvacara proceeds to the third trance. It is described as follows:

IV. 153 id. Pītiyā ca virāgā upekkhako ca viharati, sato ca sampajāno, sukhañ ca kāyena paṭisaṃvedeti, yaṃ tam ariyā ācikkhanti, upekkhako satimā sukhavihārī ti tatiyam jhānam.

IV. 156 s.d. In his comment on this passage, Upa. gives eight kinds of upekkhā while B. gives ten kinds (IV. 156), but later (IV. 167) B. explains that sankhāra-upekkhā and tatramajjhattupekkhā are included in some of the rest and so are not quite distinct. Upa. gives another three-fold classification also. Upa. also discusses the points raised by B. in IV. 171, 173 as to why upekkhā and sati-sampajañña are not mentioned in the lower trances although they are there. We also find here the simile of dhenupaka vaccha given by B. in IV. 174.

Simile from IV. 174

Diff.

Upa.'s comment on sukhañ ca kāyena.....sukha-vihārī is much different, although we can trace a passage that corresponds to the quotation from Vbh. 259, given in B. IV.176. Upa. further continues the description of the third trance:

Ekangavippahīanam, pañcanga-samannāgatam, tividha-kalyāṇam, dasa-lakkhaṇa-sampannam, dvāvīsatiguṇasampayuttam.

N.O.

This cance is illustrated by the simile from M. i. 277: Seyya-tā pi, bhikkhave, uppaliniyam vā paduminiyam vā........

apphutam hoti. The application of this simile also is given. This trance is described further as of three kinds, paritta, majjhima and panīta, leading respectively to the birth among the Parittasubha, Appamānasubha and Subhakinha gods, where the life-period is respectively limited to sixteen, thirty-two and sixty-four kappas.1

Having mastered the third trance, the yogāvacara proceeds to the fourth trance which is described in the same words as given by B. in IV. 183:

Sukhassa ca pahānā dukkhassa ca pahānā pubbeva somanassa-domanassānam atthangamā adukkhamasukham upekkhāsatipārisudhim catuttham jhānam.

Upa.'s comment on this passage generally agrees with that of B. in IV. 184-190, but does not here go into the distinction IV. 184between upacāra and appanā as he has already given that kind of distinction before.2 We also find here the quotations from S.v. 213-215, and from Vbh. 261, given by B. in IV. 186 and in IV. 194 IV. 194 respectively.

Upa. further continues the description of the trance: ekangavippahīnam, tivanga-samannāgatam,3 tividha-kalyāṇam, dasalakkhaṇa-sampannam, bāvīsatiguna-sampayuttam. nothing corresponding to the last adjective and instead of tivanga-samannāgatam he gives duvanga-samannāgatam.]

This trance is further illustrated by the simile from M.i. 277-78: Seyyathā pi, bhikkhave, puriso odātena vatthena sasīsam pārupito nisinno assa, nāssa kiñci sabbāvato kāyassa odātena vatthena apphutam assa, evameva.....etc.

An ordinary man (puthujjana) is born among the Vehapphala gods. If his mind experiences nibbida, he is born among the asaññi gods where the life-period is limited to fifty kappas. N.C. If he is a samana, he is born either among the Vehapphala

4. Cf. Abhs. p. 23, Chap. V, para 6, where the life-period of these gods is given as 500 kappas.

gods, or in one of the five planes of the Pure Abodes (Suddhā-vāsa-bhūmi).1

Upa. raises a question as to why in this trance there are no distinct grades of phala and bhūmi, as we had in the third trance. He answers that in the third trance, a coarser or a finer state is attained on account of coarser or finer angas, and so there could be had some distinct grades of phala and bhūmi; but in the fourth trance, all the angas are fine and so there can not be any such distinguishing grades.

AKASANANCAYATANA-SAMADHI.2

As described in the preceding trances, the  $yog\bar{a}vacara$  sees the disadvantages of the last trance (i. e. the fourth trance in this case), as well as of material form  $(r\bar{u}pa)$ , and sees the advantages of the Meditation of Space  $(\bar{a}k\bar{a}sa-sam\bar{a}patti)$  and considers this last as santa and vimokkha. Upa. gives the disadvantages of  $r\bar{u}pa$  in words which correspond to the first half of the passage quoted in Vis. X. 1. The disadvantages of the fourth trance are described in words which also correspond to those used by B. in X. 5.

The yogāvacara first induces the fourth trance on the paṭhavī-kasiṇa, and then breaking through the paṭhavī-nimitta he attains the ākāsānañcāyatana-samādhi.

This attainment is described in the same words from Vbh. 245 as are quoted by B. in X. 12:

Sabbaso rūpasaññānam samatikkamā, paṭigha-saññānam atthangamā, nānatta-saññānam amanasikārā, ananto ākāso ti ākāsānañcāyatanam upasampajja viharati.

The comment on this passage generally agrees with that of B. except in the case of the words  $r\bar{u}pasa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}\bar{u}$  and  $\bar{a}k\bar{a}sa$ . In the former case, Upa. agrees with Vbh. 261, and in the latter, he comes closer to Dhs. para. 638.4

In the explanation of patigha-saññā and nānatta-saññā also, Upa. felle 78 Vibhanga 261. The points raised by B. in X. 15,

- 1. See p. 120 below.
- 2. Upa. immediately after the rūpāvacara trance proceeds to the āruppas, which are treated by B. in the Xth chapter.
  - 3. B. X. 7: kasinams ugghātento.
- 4. Dhs. § 638: yo ākāso, ākāsagatam, agham aghagatam, vivaro vivaragatam, asamphuṭṭham catūhi mahābhūtehi, idam tam rūpam ākāsadhātu.

X. 12

18, 19, are also referred to by Upa. While illustrating the undisturbed condition of what Upa. calls asaññī samādhi, Upa. includes the name of Uddaka Rāmaputta also, along with that of [Alara] Kalama, whom five hundred carts passed by and still they neither saw them, nor heard any sound of the carts passing by. B. mentions this incident of only Alara Kalama. We also find, in the explanation of the word ākāsānañcāvatana. the illustration, as B. gives in X. 24, of devānam devāyatanam.

This samādhi is further described as tivanga-samannāgatam, N.C. tividha-kalyānam, dasalakkhana-sampannam, bāvīsatigunābhiyuttam to which there is nothing corresponding in B. As a reward for this trance, one is born among the ākāsānañcāyatanūpaga gods where the life-period is limited to 2000 kappas.1

VINNANANCAYATANA-SAMADHI.

The yogāvacara sees the disadvantages of the ākāsānañcāyatang-samādhī and sees the advantages of the viññānañcāyatana-samādhi, and in no long time goes from the lower to the higher samādhi, which is described in the same words from Vibhanga as are quoted in Vis. X. 27:

ākāsānañcāyatanam samatikkamma Sabbasoanantam X. 27 viññānan ti viññānañcāyatanam upasampajja viharati.

The comment on this passage agrees in general with that of B. except in the case of ākāsānañcāyatanam samatikkamma which is disposed off by Upa. in one sentence. Here also the X.31 illustration of devānam devāyatanam iva as given by B. in X. 31 is found.

Simile

As a reward for this concentration, one is born among the N.C. viññāṇañcāyatanūpaga gods, where the life-period is limited to 4000 kappas.<sup>2</sup>

AKINCANNAYATANA-SAMADHI.

Seeing the disadvantages of viññānañcāuatana-samādhi, the yogāvacara proceeds to the next higher ākincanhāvatanasamādhi, which is described as in the passage from Vbh. 245. quoted by B. in X. 36:

Sabbaso viññānañcāyatanam samatikkamma natthi kiñcī X.36 ti ākiñcaññāyatanam upasampajja viharati.

- 1. Abhs. p. 23 gives 20,000 kappas as the life-period of these gods.
- 2. Ahhs. p. 23, gives 40,000 kappas.

N.C.

In his explanation of ākiācañāyatana, Upa. gives a passage corresponding to the quotation from Vbh. 262, given by B. in X. 38. This samādhi also is further described as: tivangasamannāgatam, tividha-kalyāṇam, dasalakkhaṇa-sampannam, bāvīsatiguṇābhiyuttam.

As a reward for its attainment, one is born among the ākiñcaññāyatana gods, where the life-period is limited to 6000 kappas.

NEVASANNANASANNAYATANA-SAMADHI.

The yogāvacara proceeds to the next higher nevasaññānāsaññāyatana-samādhi, which is described in words that correspond to the quotation from M. ii. 231 given by B. in X. 40:

Saññā rogo saññā gaṇḍo.....etc.

Like B., Upa. comments on the passage quoted from Vibhanga, in Vis. X. 42.

This samādhi also is further described as: tivanga-samannā-gatam, tividha-kalyāṇam., dasalakkhaṇa-sampannam, bāvīsati-gunābhiyuttam.

As a reward for its attainment, one is born among the neva-saññānāsaññāyatana gods, where the life-period is limited to 84,000 kappas.<sup>2</sup>

PAKINNAKAKATHĀ

General remarks on this topic are made under the following heads:

X. 56-66 q.d.

N.O.

- (i) Saddanirodha. A man who enters the first trance cuts off speech, enters the fourth trance and then gradually cuts off breathing in, and breathing out, sound and smell. Here we meet with a sentence: jhānam samāpannassa saddo kanṭako, which closely corresponds to B.'s paṭhamam jhānam samāpannassa saddo kanṭako ti vutto Bhagavatā in X. 19.
- (ii) Vipallāsasaññā. He knows the pathavī-saññā and knows its characteristics and so has no vipallāsasaññā.
- 1. Cf. Abhs. p. 23, which gives 60,000 kappas as the life-period here.
- 2. Here Abhs. p. 23 agrees.
- 3. Upatissa here disposes off the question that may be raised as to why there is no viparīta saṇṇā when the yogāvacara forms paṭhavī-saṇṇā about things for which there cannot inherently be any paṭhavī-saṇṇā. (Paṭhavī-kasiṇaṃ samāpanno a-paṭhavī-saṇṇāya paṭhavī-saṇṇām karoti. Evam sati kathaṃ viparīta-saṇṇā na hoti?). His argument, however, is not quite clear.

- (iii) Vutthonam. Five causes are mentioned for emerging out of samādhi. But if he has entered upon an arūpāvacara samādhi, he does not emerge from it for any reason of the multiplicity of objects, for this samādhi is anenia-vihara. If he has entered upon nirodhasamāpatti, or upon phalasamāpatti, he emerges only as he had previously determined. No other cause can affect'him.
- (iv) Samatikkama [See B. III. 108]<sup>1</sup>:
  - (a) anga-samatikkama, as when one passes from III 108. one rūpāvacara trance to another.
  - (b) ārammaņa-samatikkama, as when one passes from rūpāvacara samādhi to arūpāvacara samādhi, or from one arūpāvacara samādhi to another.
- (v) Upacāra, The upacāra of all kinds of samādhis has five angas.
- (vi) Vitakka. Dutiyajjhānādi-gotrabhū-anantaram avitakkamavicāram.
- (vii) Vedanā. Catutthjjhānādi-gotrabhū-anantaram upekkhāya uppādo.
- (viii) Vicikicchā. If he has not cut off hindrances, kāmacchanda and the rest, he is like one who is afraid of a snake on a tree.
  - (xi) Abhabbā samādhissa uppādanāya. Four kinds of people cannot attain any samādhi. [Does this correspond very roughly to Vis. V. 40-41?].

V. 40-41 r.a.

2-4. APO-KASINA, TEJO-KASINA, VAYO-KASINA.

Upa. gives the lakkhana, rasa, etc. in three different sections, one for each of these three kasinas. Upa. agrees generally v. 1-11 with B's. remarks on the preparation of the tasina. [Cf.B. V. 3, 5, 6.1 He also agrees with B. in saying that a beginner should not practise on natural sheets of water such as ponds, lakes, rivers, ocean, but should practise on water in a bowl or basin, placed in a quiet, solitary place, neither too dark nor having too V. 9 much light. Upa's, remarks about the two-fold nimittagahana

- 1. See p. 39 above.
- 2. Usa. Cloes not enumerate whih these four are.

[diṭṭḥavasena vā phuṭṭhavasena vā] of vāyo-kasiṇa generally agree with B's. remarks in V. 9-10. Upa. also mentions in the section on vāyo-kasiṇa a sugar-cane, a bamboo-grove, or a place where rank, wild grass grows, which comes closer to ucchagga, vāļagga quoted from the Aṭṭhakathās by B. in V. 9.

5-8. NILA-KASIŅA, PITA-KASIŅA, LOHITA-KASIŅA, ODĀTA-KASIŅA.

V. 12-20

Upa here also gives the lakkhana, rasa, etc. The treatment of all these kasinas is the same except that the flowers, or pieces of cloth, or the colour used are those that correspond to these names. Here also we find the mention of a mandala that is circular, quadrilateral or triangular. A beginner should not try to take nimitta from natural things, but he should contemplate upon kasinas that are artificially made from flowers of the colour suitable to each of these kasinas. The advantages of these kasinas as given by Upa. substantially correspond to those mentioned by B. in V. 32-35.

Aloka-kasiņa.

[It is rather strange to find here, the treatment of the  $\bar{a}loka-kasina$  as well as that of the next (9b), ' $\bar{a}k\bar{a}sa$  not without  $r\bar{u}pa$ ,' although Upa. does not include them in the list of the thirty-eight kammatthanas. It is probably these that he had in his mind when he referred to the two extra ones.<sup>2</sup>]

V. 21-23

The treatment of this kasina also is the same as given in the last four, except that the artificial kasina mentioned here is different from that given in Vis. V. 22. Here Upa says that the yogāvacara should sit by the wall of the eastern or western direction, should fill a bowl of water and keep it in a place where the sun shines. From this water where the sun is shining, light will be reflected on the wall. On this [reflected light] he should meditate.

[KAMMA-DVARA (P)]

PART THREE

[Bk.6.1.4.—6.21.6 (end of Bk. 6); Tak. 424a—429c. Vis. V. 24-26, Chaps. VI & VII.]

9. Akāsa-kasina.

Upa. gives here also lakkhana, rasa, etc. He gives this kasina as of two kinds:

No such division.

- (a)  $\bar{a}k\bar{a}sa$  which is without  $r\bar{u}pa$ . [It is this that is no. 9 of the kasinas according to Upa.]
- (b) ākāsa not without rūpa, as the space in the hollow of a well.¹ [Apparently corresponding to paricchinnākāsa-kasiņa of B.V. 24-26.]

10. VINNANA-KASINA.

This is viññānākāsa.

[No details are given of this kasina.]

PAKINNAKAKATHA.

[The  $pakinnakakath\bar{a}$  as given by Upa. has nothing in common with that given by B. in V. 28-42.]

V. 28-42 q.d.

When the yogāvacara has attained mastery over one nimitta, he pursues the remaining if he likes. He may attain the four trances in succession. The four vaṇṇakasiṇas are the best because they accomplish the vimokkhas and because they enable one to reach abhibhāyatanas (除入). Of these, the odātakasiṇa is the best, because it creates light. [With this compare B. XIII. 95 where he says: imesu ca pana tīsu āloka-kasiṇam eva seṭṭhataram].

1. Taisho ed. 井.

When the mind has attained mastery over the eight kasiņas and eight samādhis, gradually, the appanā appears.

Upa. gives in this passage several details of acrobatic feats, as it were, in the use of kasiṇas and various trances attained with their help, such as going up from the first trance to the nevasaññānāsaññāyatana, back from the same to the first, or from the first to the third, then back to the second, and again forward to the fourth, and so on, up to the nevasaññānāsaññāyatana. There are several such details. [With this should be compared B. XIII. 1-7. There also we find such acrobatic feats some of which agree with those given by Upa.]

[11-20 ASUBHANI.]

11. UDDHUMATAKA.

Upa. gives as usual the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. He gives nine  $\bar{a}$ nisaṃsas of the  $uddhum\bar{a}taka$ -saññā:

- (i) ajjhatta-kāyagatāsatiyā paṭilābho.
- (ii) aniccasaññāya paţilābho.
- (iii) maraṇa-saññāya paṭilābho.
- (iv) nibbidā-bahulo.
- (v) kāma-vikkhambhanam.
- (vi) rūpamadappahānam.
- (vii) arogamadappahānam.
- (viii) sugati-parāyaņatā.
- (ix) amata-parāyaņatā.

Katham tassa nimittam ganhāti?

A whole quotation in IV. 19-22

A beginner should go alone, without any one else as his companion, as described in detail in the quotation from some older source, given in B.VI.19-22.

[It is remarkable to find the whole of this long passage ascribed by B. to the Atthakathās (Atthakathāsu vuttena vidhinā, VI.18) given here by Upa. One should be surprised to find such close similarity in thought and words and one cannot attribute it to a mere accident.]

Upa. also comments on this passage and his comment generally agrees with that of B., except in that on the words lingato, samantato and except that he says dasavidhena nimittaggāho instead of ekādasavidhena nimittaggāho of B,VI.58.

In his comment on the word lingato, Upa. says that the yogāvacara may note whether the bloated body is that of a man or woman, or of one who is old or young, or whether it is long or short, and so on, although later he says [6.8a.10] that a beginner with many kilesas should not take a mimitta from an object that is disagreeable (vi-sabhāga), which he explains as 'a woman's body to a man'. [Cf. B.VI.42=purisassa itthisarīram.]

The comment on samantato differs entirely from that of B. in VI. 49.

Upa. has only ten ways because he takes ninnato and thalato together and not separately as B. does [VI.47-48.] Besides. Upa. comments on several other expressions of this passage on which B. does not comment.

In this section Upa, treats the subject-matter covered in VI. 86-87 B.VI.50-68 and VI.86-87. Upa. also raises the point discussed by B. in V1.86, as to why only the first trance is possible on the asubhas and his answer is essentially the same as given by B. in VI. 86-87. We do not, however, find the simile of a boat rendered stable by an aritta, given by B. in VI. 86 to illustrate his explanation. Upa. also does not go into the details of the whole subject as B. does.

- 12. VINILAKA
- 13. VIPUBBAKA
- VICCHIDDKA 14.
- VIKKHAYITAKA 15.
- 16. VIKKHITTAKA
- HATAVIKKHIT-TAKA
- LOHITAKA 18.
- 19. PULUVAKA
- ATTHIKA 20.

The treatment of these asubhas is brief VI. 70-80 and almost similar. Upa. gives as usual the lakkhana, rasa, etc. The anisamsas of all are the same as those of the uddhumātaka. Even the mode of taking nimitta is the same except in vicchiddaka and vikkhittaka, where it roughly agrees with what B. says in VI.72,74. The explanation of these names of the asubhas is much different from that of B. in VI. 1-10 and VI, 70-74. The quotation from D.ii.296 alluded to by B. in VI. 78 is given here in detail. About the last asubha, atthika, Upa. like B. [VI. 80] says that the kammatthana is successful even if there is one bone, as when there is a skeleton of bones, for an object of meditation.

PAKINNAKAKATHA

A beginner with many kilesas should not take nimitta from an object that is disagreeable (vi-sabhāga), which is explained as 'a woman's body to a man'. Upa raises the question as to why the asubhas are just ten, neither more nor less. In his answer, among other things, he says: Because when the body is dead, it can be only of ten kinds and because in as much as there are [only] ten kinds of men [which are given in detail by B. in VI. 85], there are ten kinds of sañāanimitta.

Upa. closes this section, saying, with reasons, that the asubha should not be developed. He gives a quotation from the Abhidhamma, and a gāthā from Tā-te-shi-kyu-phu (大德

[21-30 ANUSSATIYO]

21. BUDDHANUSSATI.

VII. 1-67

Upa., while explaining the word Buddhānussati, comments on the word Buddha. His comment is almost word for word the same as given in Ps.i.74, para. 28, (first sub-para.), beginning with the words: Yo so Bhagavā sayambhā anācariyako..... etc. B. refers in VII. 52 to the next sub-para. only of Ps. beginning with the words: Bujjhitā saccānī ti Buddho, and so on.

Upa. as usual gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. and gives eighteen advantages, many of which are the same as given by B. in VII.67. In the same connection, he refers to a sentence from Shiu-to-lo-nieh-ti-li-chu (修多羅涅底里句) Netrī-pada-sūtra (?)² which says, 'If a man desires to reflect upon the Buddha, he is worthy to be revered like a place with the image of the Buddha'. [6.10.6; Tak. 426c.7.] [With this compare B. VII.67: Buddhaguṇānussatiyā ajjhāvutthaṃ c'assa sarīram

1. Cf. B. III. 111 which quotes the second line from the following stanza ascribed to Thera Singāla-pitā:

Ahu Buddhassa dāyādo bhikkhu bhesakalāvane kevalam aṭṭhisaṭñāya aphari paṭhavim imam maññe'ham kāmarāgam so khippam eva pahīyatī ti •

(Thera-gāthā I. 18)

2. See also p. 72. Cf. Netrīpada-Sāstra of Upagupta [Abhk. ii, 205] pi cetiyagharam iva pūjāraham hoti, which comes quite close to the sentence referred to above.]

The yogāvacara should reflect upon the Buddha in this way:

Bhagavā araham sammāsambuddho vijjācaraņa-sampanno VIII. 2 sugato lokavidū anuttaro purisadammasārathī satthā devamanussānam. It will be noticed that this is substantially the same as the passage given by B. in VII.2 and on which he bases his own exposition.

Upa, comments on this whole passage. His comment sometimes agrees with that of B. and sometimes it does not. It is very simple and there is nothing corresponding to the artificial and scholastic interpretation of the word Bhagavā as given by B. in VII.54-64. While commenting on the word vijjācaranasampanno, Upa. gives in full the explanation of vijjā and carana, as given in the Bhayabherava<sup>1</sup> and the Ambattha<sup>2</sup> suttas, diff. while B. merely refers to it. While commenting on the word lokavidū, Upa, speaks of only two lokas, sattaloka and sankhāraloka, and even their explanation is altogether different from B.'s interpretation of these words. [VII.38,39]

Expl. often

VII. 38, 39

[Now follows a section to which B. has nothing corresponding in the chapter on 'Cha Anussatiniddesa'. But later in IX.25-35, he has something which corresponds only in a general spirit to this section of Upa. The details are quite different.]

The yogāvacara should reflect upon the Tathāgata in four ways:

(i) By reflecting upon the preparation made by the IX. 25-35 Buddha in his past lives, before he became the Buddha (i. e. while he was a Bodhisatta). During the long period of twenty-four asankheyya kappas, and one hundred ayutas3, i.e. since the time when the Bodhisatta expressed his aspiration (panidhāna) to become the Buddha until his last life, the Buddha, not being satisfied with special religious distinctions he had attained,

2. Digha, 3rd Sutta.

<sup>3.</sup> Cf. Vis. IX. 26: Satthā pubbeva sambodhā anabhisambuddho bodhisatto pi samāno cattūri asankheyyāni kappasatasahassan ca pāramiyo pūrayamāno. Also Jā. vol. i. 3, Buddhavamsa, p. 6, which both read: Kappe ca satasahasse ca caturo ca asankhiye.

was always working for others, trying to save them. He practised the pāramitās¹ of dāna, sīla, nekkhamma, khanti, saoca, adhiṭṭhāna, mettā, upekkhā, viriya and paññā. Upa. refers to various stories which illustrate the pāramitās practised by the Buddha, while he was a Bodhisatta. Among these stories, the following can be traced:

The stories of Sasajātaka (Cariyāpiṭaka I. 10, p. 82; Jā. iii. 51-56), of Mahā-Govinda (D. ii. 220-252, sutta no. xix) Saccasavhaya (? Cariyāpiṭaka III. 7, p. 97), Mūgapakkha (Cariyāpiṭaka III.6, p. 96-97), Lomahaṃsa-jātaka (Jā. i. 389-91), Seṭṭhi-jātaka², of Dīghāvu (Vin. i. 342-349, Chap. x.), Chaddanta jātaka (Jā. v. 36-57), Valāhassa (Jā. ii. 127-130), Nigrodhamiga (Jā. i. 145-153), Mahākapi (Jā. iii. 369ff., no. 407). The story of Mahākapi referred to by B. in IX.31 is the story³ from Jā. v. 67-74 and is also referred to by Upa.

In this way the yogāvacara should reflect upon the virtues practised by the Buddha in his past lives.

(ii) By reflecting as to how the Blessed one pulled himself out [of the mire of this world.]

The yogāvacara reflects how the Buddha [while he was still a Bodhisatta] left his wife and child, father, mother cycd other relatives, and in search of the peaceful nibbāndd! went to Magadha country, crossed the Neranjarā river, went, o the Bodhi tree, defeated Māra and his army. In the first part of the night, he recalled his past life, in the middle he attained the Divine Eye, and in the last he destroyed samudaya (taṇhā), reached the immortal state (amatadhātu), cultivated the eight angas of the Right Path and experienced the destruction of the āsavas.

(iv) By reflecting that the Blessed One did a great good to the world, that he, having compassion upon the people, turned the Wheel of the Law, opened the gates of deathlessness (amatadvāra), that he made innumerable gods and men reach the sāmaññāphala, that by the three kinds of miracles (pātihāriya) he made the people entertain faith, opened the sugatis, preached the Pātimokkha and so on.

By reflecting in these four ways, the mind of the yogāvacara attains faith, becomes free from distraction, and the jhānangas arise.

Upa. agrees with B. VII. 66. in saying that by this reflection upon the Buddha, the mind does not reach appanā but only upacāra.

Upa. concludes this section with a remark, "Further it is said [by some] that by reflecting upon the Buddha even the fourth trance is reached."

VII. 68-88 22. DHAMMANUSSATI.

B. does not give any comment on the word Dhamma. Upa's. comment on the same word is worth noting. Here it is:

N.C.

Dhammo ti nibbānam, nibbānagāminī paṭipadā ca.

Kā nibbānagāminī paṭipadā? Cattāro satipaṭṭhānā, cattāro sammappadhānā, cattāro iddhipādā, pañca indriyāni, pañca balāni, satta sambojjhangāni, aṭṭha sammā maggangāni, ayaṃ vuccati nibbānagāminī paṭipadā.²

Kim nibbanam?

N.C.

Sabbasankhārasamatho, sabbūpadhi-paṭinissaggo, taṇhak-khayo, virāgo, nirodho, nibbānam.*

Upa. as usual gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. He mentions dhammavicaya as its rasa. The ānisaṃsas are the same as those of Buddhānussati.

Upa. like B. takes the following text for the exposition of the subject:

VII. 68.

The comment on the words of this passage is in many places different. For instance, the comment on the word sanditthiko Expl. is: maggānañ ca phalānañ ca anupubbādhigamattā, nibbānassa often diff. ca maggaphalānañ ca sacchikiriyāya sanditthiko, which is quite different from B.'s comment on that word given in VII. 76-79. Similarly the comment on the words: ehipassiko paccattam veditabbo viññūhi is different although the words corresponding to B.'s ehi passa are met with here.

Upa. goes into several other details as to how one should reflect upon the Dhamma.

When the yogāvacara thus reflects in this way, his mind develops faith, becomes free from distraction, destroys hindrances, and the factors of trance gradually arise in him and the upacāra-samādhi is reached.

The rest is as has already been said in the Buddhānussati.

23. SANGHANUSSATI.

Upa., as usual, explains the word sangha and gives the lakkhana, rasa, etc. As a text for his exposition, Upa. takes a passage which is almost the same as is quoted in VII. 89 by B. from A. iii. 286:

VII. 89-100

Supatipanno Bhagavato sāvakasangho, ujupatipanno...... anuttaram puññakkhettam lokassa.

The comment generally agrees with that of B. although, here and there, it differs. Upa.'s interpretations of the word supatipanna are many more than that of B. The comment on āhuņeyyo, pāhuņeyyo is very concise.

24-26. SILANUSSATI, CAGANUSSATI, DEVATANUSSATI.

Upa. explains these terms and gives their lakkhana, rasa, etc. The texts taken for their exposition are the same passages from A. iii. 286-87 as are quoted by  $B_{\bullet}$  in VII. 101, 107, 115, respectively. Upa. gives no comment on the last two passages and even in his comment on the first, Upa. differs considerably from B. • The latter is more prolix and scholastic.

N.C.

At the end of the section on Devatānussati a point is raised as to why we should reflect upon the merits of gods and not upon the merits of men. Upa.'s answer is, "because the merits of gods are superior, lead to superior heavens and excellent states. By dwelling upon excellent states, one's mind becomes excellent. So we should reflect upon the merits of gods and not upon those of men."

The rest is as is said before.

CHAPTER VIII

行門

[KAMMA-DVARA (?)]

PART FOUR

[Bk. 7.1.4-7.19a.9; Tak. 429c-435a. Cf. Vis. VIII.145-244.]

27. ANAPANASATI.

[This whole section has many passages closely similar to the corresponding portion of the Vis., namely VIII. 145-244. In the first place it is to be noted that Upa. takes this section before the sections on maraṇasati and kāyagatāsati, which even according to the o'der in which they are mentioned in the chapter on kammaṭṭhāna,¹ precede ānāpānasati. Another thing to be noted is that in this section Upa. uses throughout the words ān-phān 安 般 the Chinese transliteration of the word ānāpāna although he has used 數 息 above, in the list given in the chapter on kammaṭṭhanas (p. 38, Vim. 3.6a.6.)]

VIII. 145-244

As usual, Upa. explains the word ānāpāna and gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. While giving the ānisaṃsas, he mentions several, which are given in B. in VIII.238-244., particularly the passage from M.iii.82 quoted in VIII.239. The words cattāri satipaṭṭhāne paripūreti.....[vijjā]²-vimuttiṃ paripūreti are found word for word.

VIII. 238-44

VIII. 239

VIII. 145

The cultivation of this reflection is described substantially in the same words from S. v.322 quoted by B. in VIII.145: Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu araññagato vā rukkhamūlagato vā... paṭinissaggānupassī passasissāmī ti sikkhati.

While commenting on the first part of the passage, Upa. like B. goes into many details of the practice of breathing, as to how one should direct one's attention to the tip of the nose or the [upper] part of the lip, and that one should note the breathings only as they touch the body and not before or after. The quotation from Ps.i.165 given by B. in VIII.197 is given by Upa. in an abridged form in 7.2.8-9. So also, the simile of a saw (kakaca) given by B. in VIII.201-202 is given by Upa. in 7.2.5-6 in an abridged form.

1. See p. 38.

VIII. 214-15

When the yogāvacara has purified his mind from nine¹ upakkilesas the paṭibhāga-nimitta appears. Regarding the appearance of this nimitta, we find a very interesting passage, which corresponds to B.'s statement [VIII.214]: tūlapicu viya, vātadhārā viya ca upaṭṭhātī ti ekacce² āhu. Upa. also further refers to the appearance of the nimitta as dhūmasikhā, valāhakapaṭala, and as what corresponds to pāmanga-sutta and dārusārasūci of B.VIII.215.

Gradually, by practising this breathing, one's mind becomes free from nīvaraṇas, and the trance is attained. All the rest has been already described in detail.

And again, former teachers have mentioned four<sup>3</sup> ways of cultivating ānāpānasati:

VIII. 190

(i) Gaṇanā: to count numbers from one to ten and not beyond ten; or to count from one to five and not beyond five. [Cf. B.VIII.190.]

VIII. 196

- (ii) Anubandhanā: explained in exactly the same words as are used by B. in VIII.196: anubandhanā nāma gaṇanaṃ paṭisaṃharitvā satiyā nirantaraṃ assāsānaṃ anugamanam.
- (iii) Thapanā: to direct the attention to the point where the wind of the breath touches the tip of the nose or the lip.
- (iv) Sallakkhanā: to reflect upon the nimitta and produce from this pīti, sukha and other dhammas.

Upa. also gives another alternative interpretation of all these four words.

VIII. 173

While commenting on the word sikkhati, Upa. refers to the three sikkhās, adhisīlasikkhā, adhicittasikkhā, adhipaññāsikkhā and gives a passage which is identical with B.'s passage [VIII.173]: yo vā tathābhūtassa saṃvaro,.....bahulīkaroti.

In his comment on passambhayam kāyasankhāram assasissmi .....etc., Upa. following Paţisambhidā explains kāyasankhāra as

- 1. Upa. does not tell'us which these nine are.
- 2. Dhammapāla commenting on the word ekacce simply says: eke ācariyā [Burmese edition p. 305).]
  - 3. Cf. B. VIII. 189 where eight are mentioned.

assāsapassāsa. We can also trace in Upa. a passage that corresponds to the synonymous words anamana, vinamana...etc. given by B. in VIII.181 as quoted from Ps.i.184-86.

VIII. 181

In his comment on pītipaṭisaṃvedī, Upa. uses words which correspond to B.'s dvīhi ākārehi pīti patisamviditā hoti: ārammaņato ca asammohato ca. [VIII.226.]

VIII. 226

Upa.'s comment on cittasankhārapatisamvedī, assasissmmī ti ... passambhayam cittasankhāram roughly agrees with that given by B. in VIII.229-30. But that on cittapatisamvedi, abhippamodayam cittam, samādaham cittam has nothing corresponding to B., while that on vimocayam cittam differs considerably fromB.'s comment.

VIII. 229-30

Upa., while commenting on vimocayam cittam says that if the yogāvacara while practising the inhaling or exhaling finds his mind dull, he frees it from dulness; if he finds it distracted, he frees it from distraction; if he finds it elated, he frees it from rāga: if he finds it low in spirits, he frees it from hatred (dosa); if he finds it impure, he frees it from upakkilesas. Further if he finds that his mind does not take delight in the ārammaņa, he makes it take delight in it. [When we compare this comment with that given by B. in VIII.233, we find that B.'s comment is more artificial and scholastic, while that of Upa. is much simpler and more natural.]

VIII. 233

The comment on aniccanupassi.....paţinissaggānupassī assasissāmi also differs considerably from that of B. (VIII. 234-36.)

VIII. 234-36 diff.

Of these sixteen ways of cultivating the anapanasati (as ex- VIII. 237 pressed in the quotation which forms the basis for the whole exposition of this subject), Upa. agrees with B. [VIII.237] in saying that the first twelve constitute samatha and vipassanā, while the last only vipassanā.

Upa. again gives the passage from M.iii.82, quoted by B. VIII. 239 in VIII.239, showing how the cultivation of anapanasati fulfills the four satipatthanas......the cultivation of the seven factors of enlightenment (sambojjhangāni) fulfills vijjāvimutti.

Upa. makes another important remark that by cultivating the seven factors of enlightenment, vijjā is perfected at the moment_of reaching the Path, while the vimutti is perfected at the moment of the attainment of the Fruit.

A point is raised as to why this ānāpāntasati is called vitakka- VIII. 238 upaccheda. The answer roughly corresponds to B.'s VIII.238, r.a. There is, however, in addition an interesting simile of a gandhabba who hearing any sound runs after it. Vitakka, like a gandhabba, runs after objects and therefore ought to be banished. Vitakka-upaccheda is also illustrated by the attentive state of the mind of a man who is walking on a [narrow] embankment.

VIII. 1-41

VIII. 41

28. MARANASATI. [Bk. 7.8.6-7.11a.9; Tak. 431c-432c. Cf. Vis. VIII.1-41.1

Upa. defines the word marana as āyusankhārassa upacchedo2 and gives as usual the lakkhana, rasa, etc. He gives anisamsas many of which are the same in sense—though different in expressions—as those given by B. in VIII.41.

While speaking of the way of cultivating the practice of maranasati, Upa. says that a man should always think of the death of other beings and reflect that, like others, he also is subject to death, and has not gone beyond it. In this connection Upa. refers to Nieh-ti-li-po-tho-shiu-to-lo 涅底履波陀修多羅<sup>3</sup> which says: "If a man wants to reflect upon deatn, he should reflect upon a dead person and see the cause of his death."

N.C.

N.O.

N.C.

This reflection upon death is of four kinds:

- (i) With sorrow, as when one's beloved child dies.
- (ii) With surprise, as when a child all of a sudden dies.
- (iii) With indifference as when a corpse-burner (chavadāhaka) looks at a lifeless body.
- (iv) With insight (ñāṇa 智 )—To consider all things as impermanent and to produce disgust for worldly things (nibbidā).

Out of these, the yogāvacara should cultivate the last.

Death is of three kinds:

- (i) Sādhāraṇa-maraṇa [等死], to which all living beings are subject.
- (ii) Samuccheda-marana, as that of the kilesas destroyed by an Arhat.
- (iii) Khanika-marana, that of the sankhāras which cease to exist every moment.

Also, it is of two kinds:

- (i) Akālika: If a man dies before he reaches the middle age, either because of his own effort, or because of others, because of disease or without any cause.
- 1. That is how I interpret it. It is, however, liable to a different interpretation with different punctuation.
  - 2. Cf. Vis. VIII. 1: ekabhavapriyāpannassa jīvitindriyassa upacchedo.
  - 3. 7.8a.4; Tak. 431c.22-23. See p. 62 above.

(ii) Kālika: If a man dies, because life has come to an end, or because of old age.

On both of these the yogāvacara should reflect.

Moreover, former teachers have prescribed eight ways of reflecting upon death: [B. also gives eight, which are mostly the same except nos. ii & vii below].

VIII. 9-13

- (i) Vadhakapaccupatthānato. One should think that one is being pursued by death just as a man who is being led to the post of execution always sees that he is being followed by the executioner. (With this compare B. VIII.9-13, B. is more elaborate and gives many more illustrations.
- (ii) Akāraņato. Without any cause or means that would N.C. prevent death from coming; just as when the sun and the moon arise there is nothing to prevent them from setting.
- (iii) 以本取, by referring to persons of the past time. VIII. 16-24 This corresponds to B.'s upasamharanato VIII.16-24.] The great personages mentioned here below have all died:
  - (a) Great kings like Mahāsudassana and 頂生¹ VIII. 17 [B.VIII.17].
  - (b) Great personages with miraculous powers like Vessāmitta and Yamataggi (閣庫達梨)² who diff. could emit fire and water from their body.
  - (c) Great disciples like Sāriputta and Moggallāna. VIII. 21 [B.VIII.21].
  - (d) Paccekabuddhas.

VIII. 22

(e) Tathāgatas.

VIII. 23

- 1. Mvy. 3557 gives Murdhatah (Murdhajātah?) corresponding to Tibetan Spyi-bo-Skyes A A which is explained by S. C. Das in his Tibetan Dictionary p. 807 as 'an epithet of King Mandhata, a legendary ancestor of Gautama Buddha.' Apte's Dictionary gives the following information about Māndhātṛ-Name of a king of the Solar race, son of Yuvanāśva (being born from his own belly). As soon as he came out of his own belly, the sages said: kam eşa dhāsyati, whereupon Indra came down and said: mām dhāsyati, The boy was therefore called Māndhātr.
  - 2. For these names see D. i. 104, 238-43; A. iv. 61.

VIII. 25-26

(iv) Kāyabahusādhāraṇato. [Cf. B.VIII.25-26.] That the possession of the body is considered to be shared with others like vāta, semha, worms, food and drink not properly digested, poisonous serpents, centipedes, lions, tigers, leopards, dragons, oxen, because when attacked by them the bedy succumbs.

[A part of the quotation from A.iii.36 given by B. in VIII.26 is clearly traced in this passage.]

VIII, 27-28 s.d.

- (v) Ayudubbalato. [Slightly different from B.VIII. 27-28.] The life of beings is weak for two reasons:
  - (a) Because the place or the abode (referring thereby to the body) is too weak, unreal, unsubstantial, like a bubble, or foam of water.

VIII. 27

(b) Because the nissaya ( At ) on which it depends is weak. We find in almost similar words, though in a different order, the words in the passage given by B. in VIII.27, beginning with the words assāsapassāsūpanibaddham.

VIII. 34-38

(vi) Addhānaparicchedato. [Cf. B.VIII. 34-38.] It is interesting to note that Upa. also says here that from times ancient, people have come into existence [and gone]. Now no one lives past hundred years. [B. in the same connection limits the period of time to present days by adding the word etarahi.]

[The long passage from A.iii.305-06, quoted by B. in VIII 36-37 appears here in a slightly abridged form.]

VIII. 24-33 q.d. (vii) Animittato. Because it has no nimitta there is no fixed time. [? Not quite clear.]

VIII. 39

(viii) Khanato. Upa, refers to a passage from the Abhidhamma, which corresponds to that quoted by B. in VIII.39. Excepting the second verse of the three verses and the last quarter of the third, the whole passage is the same.

In this way nibbidā is produced, mind becomes free from distraction, and the trance is reached.

A small paragraph is added about the distinction between aniccasañãa and maranasati.

1. This passage is traced to Nd.1.42.

Aniccasaññā has, for its object, the coming into and passing N.C. out of existence of the khandhas, while maraṇasati concerns itself with the disintegration of the indrivas. By the cultivation of the aniccasaññā and anattasaññā, one removes pride and egoism, while, by the cultivation of the maraṇasati, aniccasaññā and dukkhasaññā become firmly established.

By the cessation of life mind ceases [to exist.]

Maranasati niţthitā.

29. KAYAGATASATI.

Upa. as usual gives the explanation of the word kāyagatāsati VII as reflecting on the nature of the body and also gives the p.a. lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. He gives the ānisaṃsas many of which correspond to those given by B. in VIII.144. Upa. also includes among them aniccasaññā, anattasaññā, asubhasaññā and ādīnavasaññā. When Upa. comes to the text giving the method VII of cultivating this reflection, he gives the same list of the thirty-id. two parts of the body as is quoted from M.iii.90 in Vis. VIII.44.

VIII. 144 p.a.

VIII. 44 id.

Upa. gives those different ways of reflecting upon this text as are given by B. in VIII.48. He also adds that a dosacarita should reflect upon the vanna, a rāgacarita upon the disgusting nature [of the body], and a paññācarita on the dhātus. In this way he produces the nimitta.

VIII. 48

Further he should reflect upon the nature of the body in the N.C. following thirteen ways:

- (i) Bijato. As from a poisonous seed are produced N.C. different kinds of grass, such as kusa, so this body is produced from the impurities of the father and mother and so it becomes impure.
- (ii) Thanato. This body is not produced from among XVI. 37 flowers, or lotuses, but in the narrow place of the womb, which is an abode of many stinking impurities. This corresponds to B.'s description of the womb from which a person is born, as given in Vis. XVI.37.
- (iii) Paccayato. This body, however taken care of, will never be regarded as precious like gold, silver, pearls, etc. or like candana or tagara and so on; because it receives its nourishment from the impurities in the womb of the mother.
- (iv) Nissandato. Like a bag full of fesces and urine, this XI. 22-23 body is always leaking through the nine openings. P.a.

With this compare B.XI.22-23, especially the last quarter of the stanza in para. 23, navadvārehi sandati.l

N.C.

(v) 以 次 第 形. The form in successive times. Upa. refers to the first four stages of the growth of the foetus by the names of kalala, abbuda, pesi, ghana, and further traces the growth of the foetus from week to week up to forty-two weeks1 when the child is born. In the twenty-ninth week the body is equipped with all the limbs. Upa. also agrees with B.'s navanvutiyā lomakūpasahassehi [B.VI.89.]

N.C.

(vi) Kimikulato. Upa. refers to eighty thousand2 kimikulas, while B. mentions only eighty. [VIII.25.] It is interesting to note that Upa, gives a long list of the names of different worms residing in different parts of the body.3 They seem to be all transliterations of Indian names. For instance, a name like munalamukkha can be traced here.

XI. 56

(vii) 以安. How one bone is placed in relation to the other. This agrees with B.XI.55.

VIII. 101 s.d.

(viii) Kalāpato. This is in substantial agreement with B.VIII.101 except that according to B, there are three hundred bones in the human body excluding the thirty-two teeth, while according to Upa. there are three hundred including the thirty-two teeth.

VI. 90 r.s.

(ix) Jigucchanato. ] [Both these paragraphs roughly correspond to B. VI.90.] However one may try to decorate the body with good clothing or by smearing it with scents, it never gives up its character of being impure.

(x) Asubhato.

- 1. For details see my article 'Unidentified Sources of the Vimuttimagga' published in the Annals of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona, vol. XV, parts III-IV (1934) p. 211. Also see Appendix A.
- 2. See Sik. p. 81: aşītim krimikulasahasrāni yāni tişthanti antare; p. 129: santi asmin kāye ašītih krimikulasahasrāni.

The names in this list of worms do not agree with the list found in the Atharva-veda, Bk. II. Eymns 31-32, Bk. V. hymn 33, nor with the list found in Indian medical works like Astanga-hrdaya, Susuta, Caraka, etc.

3. See Appendix A where I am re-producing, with the necessary corrections, a substantial part of the article referred to above in note 1.

- (xi) Nidhanato. It is the seat of many diseases and there are innumerable dangers (ananta-ādīnavā) in the body.
- (xii) Akataññuto. It is like an ungrateful relative. How- N.C. soever one may take care of the body by feeding it with the most delicious food, it is sure to leave one and go towards old age and death.
- (xiii) Sa-pariyantato. It is sure to come to an end either by being cremated or buried, eaten up, destroyed. or disintegrated.

When the yogāvacara has thus reflected on the nature of the body, his mind becomes free from distraction, the nivaranas vanish and the factors of trance arise.

[The whole of this section on Kāyagatāsati differs widely from that in Vis. Upa. does not go into the detailed explanation of the thirty-two parts of the body. But he gives a detailed list of the names of different worms inhabiting the different parts of the body.

UPASAMANUSSATI.

Upa. explains the word upasama as kāyacittānam injanavipphandana-nirodha. He also gives as usual the lakkhana, rasa, etc.

When he comes to the anisamsas, he gives exactly the same VIII. 251 as are given by B. in Vis. VIII.251. The method of cultivating this reflection is to think upon the anisamsas. We do not here find the passage taken by B. as a text for his exposition. It is a great fortune to see, or hear the Law from, a monk who is described as silasampanno, samādhisampanno, paññāsampanno, vimuttisampanno, vimuttiñānadassanasampanno. In this reflection, if a man attains the first trance, he reflects upon that aspect of the trance which has been abandoned by him (pahānanga), that is to say, the nīvaraṇas; in the second trance on the vitakka and vicāra, and so on, up to saññā-vedayitanirodha. So also if he has reached the Sotapattiphala he thinks upon the cessation of some kilesas; if he has attained the Second Fruit, he thinks upon the cessation of the olarika-kāmarāgapatigha and so on. When he reaches Arhatship, he thinks of all the kilesas which he has destroyed. When he attains nibbana he thinks of the cessation of all things by upasamānussati.

In this way he produces faith, has his mind free from distraction, destroys nīvaranas and the trance-factors appear. He attains the upacārasamādhi.

PAKINNAKAKATHA.

Upa. adds pakinnakakathā in which he gives a summary in a sentence each of the mode of cultivating the first six anussatis.

PART FIVE

[31-34 APPAMANNA]

[Bk. 8.1.5—8.23.5; Tak. 435a—439a. Cf. Vis. Chaps. IX & XI]
31. METTA. [Bk. 8.1.5—8.8a.10; Tak. 435a.—1437. Cf. B.IXth Chapter.]

Upa. explains the word mettā in this way. Just as father and mother have affection for their only child, have always friendly feelings for it, and have the good of the child at their heart, so one should love all beings and desire their welfare. This is mettā. He also gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. He mentions eleven ānisaṃsas which are exactly the same as are given in the quotation from A.v.342 given by B. in IX.37.

Before one starts the cultivation of this mettā, one should first see the disadvantages in ill-will (dosa) and the advantages in forbearance (khanti). [Cf. Vis. IX.1.]. Unlike B. who merely refers to some passages giving the disadvantages and advantages, Upa. goes into all the details of these, showing how one should see the disadvantages of dosa and advantages of khanti. He refers to the simile of a saw (kakaca) referred to by B. in IX.15, and further gives some beautiful similes to illustrate how, if one goes on cherishing ill-will, one would be like

- (i) a man who wishes to take a bath but enters unclean and impure [water].
- (ii) a physician himself suffering from a disease.
- (iii) a painted vase full of impurity but still uncovered.
- (iv) a man who eats poisoned food deliberately.
  - (v) a man who does not use, even when bitten by a serpent, the antidote against poison which he carries in his hand

Upa. also gives the details of the advantages of khanti.

He agrees with R. in saying that when one starts cultivating mettā, one should not start with an enemy or a neutral

1. Cf. Sn. stanzas 149-150.

IX. 37

IX. 1

N.C.

person but with oneself. Then gradually he should proceed to one who is dear, one who is neutral and lastly an enemy. It is interesting to note that while Upa. gives a list of good things which one may wish everyone to possess, he mentions the eleven advantages referred to above and, among other things, adds birth in the Middle-Country (majjhimadesupapatti), meeting good people (sappurisa), freedom from disease, long life and nicca-sukhavihāra. These additional things we do not find in B. He may also wish to destroy akusaladhammas if they have already N.C. arisen in him, and not to allow them to arise if they have not yet arisen. Similarly, if the kusaladhammas have already not arisen in him, he should endeavour to make them arise and should cultivate them if they have already arisen in him.2 If he can not have the feelings of metta for a majjhatta, then for some time he should wait and try to find out defects in himself. He should be ashamed of himself. He should say that the Buddha practised metta even upon his enemy, while he himself can not practise even upon a neutral person. He should think of his good qualities only, as when one takes water, one removes dirt from it and then takes it. Then he goes into several details of the ways and means to remove ill-will, among which we find the mention of kammassakatā referred to by B. in IX.23,24, and danasamvibhaga referred to by B. in IX.39.

Upa. also refers to the sīmasambheda mentioned by B. in IX.40. Gradually he extends the feelings of friendliness to all people in one direction, then to those in the second, third, and so on, to the whole world. He gives the same passage from Vibhanga p. 272 as is quoted by B. in IX.44. Similarly Upa., like B. (IX.5) says that it should not be practised upon a dead person because there the ārammaṇa itself is lost and so mettā can not be produced.

Upa. next deals with the following questions:

METTAYA

(i) kim mūlam? (ii) kim paccupatthānam? (iii) kā sampatti? (iv) kā vipatti? (v) kim ārammaņam?

In answer to the first question he gives five things: alobha, adosa, amoha, rāga and sammā-manasikāra. Although B. refers to the next three questions in IX.93, his explanations are quite different from those of Upa. In answer to the last, Upa. says that a satta is the ārammaṇa but he is careful to add that in the strictest sense, there is no satta (paramatthato satto nāma na vijjati na labbhati) but only that which is conventionally called by the world satta.

[Here now follows a digression to which B. has nothing corresponding in the Vis.]

In order to cultivate mettā for all beings, the Buddha while he was a Bodhisatta practised the ten pāramitas of dāna, sīla, nekkhamma, pāññā, viriya, khanti, sacca, adhiṭṭhāna, mettā and upekkhā.

He refers to the four adhitthānas' which are accomplised by the fulfilment of the ten pāramitas. By the fulfilment of the four adhitthānas, he fulfilled samatha and vipassanā. By the fulfilment of samatha he fulfilled all jhānas, vimokkhas, samādhis, samāpattis, Yamakapāṭihāriya-samādhi² and Mahākaruṇāsamādhi² By the fulfilment of vipassanā he fulfilled all abhiññās, paṭisaṃbhidas, balas and vesārajjas. As a perfection of the pakatiñāna he fulfilled sabbaññutañāna.

Upa. concludes this section with 'evan Bodhisattamahāsatto mettam bhāvetvā anukkamena bodhim paripūresi.'

[This whole section contains much that is not found in B. So also there is much in B. that is not found here. As, for instance, Upa. gives no details such as odhiso pharaṇā, anodhiso pharaṇā etc., given by B. in IX.49-52.]

32. KARUNA.

[Bk. 8.9.1—8.10.2; Tak. 437a.—437b. Cf. Vis. IX.77-83.]

IX. 108

N.C.

Here also as well as in the following two sections, the simile of the father and mother looking at their only child with feelings of compassion, delight and equanimity is used [Cf. B.IX.108] to explain the words karuṇā, muditā and upekkhā. Upa. gives as usual the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc., and also in addition sampatti and vipatti. Upa. agrees with B. in his statement about the paccupatthāna only, which according to both is vihiṃsā. The ānisaṃsas are the same as in mettā. The order of the persons on whom it is to be cultivated in succession is the same, although Upa. does not mention piyapuggala.

- 1. Sacca, cāga, upasama and paññā; see Mvy. 1581-84.
- 2. See p. 29 and note 2 on the same; also see Netti, pp. 99-100.

33. MUDITA.

The statement is almost the same as in B.

34. UPEKKHA.

Upa. gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc., which agree with what B. gives in IX.96. Then there is also a passage which gives the substance of B. IX.88: mettādisu paṭiladdhatikacatukkajjhānena paguṇatatiyajjhānā vuṭṭhāya...purimāsu ādīnavaṃ disvā...upekkhāya ca ānisaṃsaṃ disvā... Similarly we can trace the expressions from Vibhanga 275 ekaṃ puggalaṃ neva manāpaṃ, na amanāpaṃ disvā quoted by B. in IX.88.

IX. 96

IX. 88

The order of persons, on whom it is to be cultivated in succession is different in Upa. After majjhatta, he takes verī and then piyapuggala, while B. puts verī last (IX.89.) A fine simile is given for the upekkhā which comes after the first three, mettā, karuṇā and muditā. Just as a man, when he sees his relative coming back from afar after a long separation, rejoices and pays attention to him, but later, when he has been in his company for some time, he fails to pay the same attention, and gradually becomes indifferent; so the yogāvacara leaves the first three bhāvanās and proceeds to the fourth.

IX. 89 diff.

PAKINNAKAKATHA.

[The whole discussion under this heading is very important and very much corresponds to B.'s IX.103—to the end of the IXth chapter.]

IX. 103-124

One should start with the cultivation of these appamaññās with only one living being as the ārammaṇa. He may practise them upon tiracchānayoni, dussīla, sīlavanta, kāmesu nibbiṇṇa, sāvaka, paccekabuddha, and sammāsaṃbuddha.

A point is raised: why is it that the first three bhāvanās have only the first three trances and not the fourth? The answer is that the sufferings of beings produce byāpāda, ahimsā, and arati and they have as their appropriate remedy a mind with somanassa and so he practises mettā, karuṇā and muditā, and therefore only the three trances are produced and not the fourth. He also gives the argument referred to by B. in IX. 111, that upekklātābhūmi is the fourth jhāna.

IX. 711

It is very interesting to note that here we find, as an alternative view of some, the same passage from Atthakanipāta (A. IV. 300) quoted by B. in IX.112, to prove according to them

IX. 112 quotation id. the view that all the appamaññas can have the fourth trance. Upa. simply quotes the passage introducing it with the remark 'moreover it is said' and makes no comment at all.

IX. 108

IX. 119-123

Also another point is raised: why is it that these appamnas are just four, neither three nor five? The answer is 'because they are the paṭipakkha of byāpāda, vihesā, arati and paṭghānunaya', which are only four. With this compare B. IX.108.

The appamaññas have one lakkhaṇa in so far as they are the opposite of the ādīnavas, have living beings as their ārammaṇa, and have the thought of hitasukha; but they have distinct lakkhaṇas in that the paṭipakkha, ārammaṇa, and hitasukha of each are distinct from those of the others. In this connection Upa. also refers to the Yellow-Garment-Sutta (黃衣修多羅Haṭiddavasanasutta) from which he gives the same passage (S. v. 119-121) that is quoted by B. in IX. 119. Upa. concludes this section with the remarks on this passage which closely agree with B. IX. 120—123.

35. CATUDHATUVAVATTHANA.

[Bk. 8. 13a. 9—8. 20a. 4; Tak. 438b. 25-440b. 13. Cf. B. XI. 27—to the end of Chap. XI].

[It is to be noted here that Upa. gives this section before the section on āhāre paṭikkūlasaññā, just the reverse of the order of B. In the list of the kammatthānas mentioned by Upa. earlier (4.6a.2-9) they are mentioned in this same order as is followed by Upa. here.]

XI. 117 s.d. As usual, here also Upa. gives lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. He enumerates eight ānisamsas which are almost the same as are given by B. in XI. 117, with the exception that instead of vālamigayakkharakkhasādivikappam anāpajjanto of B., Upa. gives itthipurisavikappam jahati.

Like B., Upa. also treats this subject in two ways, sankhepato, vitthārato. (Cf. B. XI. 28-44 and XI. 45ff. 1. In his detailed discussion, Upa. follows the passages from M. i. 185, 187, 188, quoted by B. in XI. 31. Upa. does not comment, as B. does, on the difficult words of the passages, nor does he give a detailed explanation of the thirty-two parts of the body.

XI. 31 diff.

Upa. refers to the following ten-fold classification of the former teachers, while Begives a thirteen-fold classification but does not refer to any teachers of the plast. [B. XI. 86].

XI. 89, 100

XI. 98

XI. 87

One should reflect upon the four dhatus in the following ways:

- (i) Vacanatthato. Two kinds of attha: sāmañña and visesa are given as in B. XI. 81. This is further classified into
  - (a) Mahantapātubhāvato. This corresponds to B. XI. 97 and, in addition, we find in the verses given by Upa. first lines of the first two verses and the third verse in Vis. VII. 41 and the first verse in XI. 102. In these verses there is also a reference to the seventh sun. (Cf. Sattasuriyasutta, A. iv. 100-103.)

(b) Although these mahābhūtas are not real, they appear to be real. These mahābhūtas appear as man, or woman, long or short, or as a tree or a mountain. [Cf. Vis. XI. 100 and the last two lines of XI. 89].

(c) Just as a man possessed by spirits becomes either stiff or strong, light or moving, so this body becomes.

(d) Upa. gives the interpretations of the words pathavī, āpo, tejo, vāyo and dhātu, which are the same as are given by B. in XI. 87. Upa. goes into more details.

(ii) Kiccato (以事). This mentions the functions of each of the dhātus, corresponding to what B. says in XI.93 under the rasa of each of these.

(iii) Kalāpato. This corresponds to B. XI. 88, although XI. 88
Upa. goes into many more details.

(iv) Cunnato. This corresponds to B. XI. 89. There is XI. 8 a passage which corresponds to imasmim hi sarīre p.a. majjhimena pamānena..., though it does not agree with it in all the details.

(v) Avinibbhogato. This partly corresponds to B. XI. XI. 105, 105. The explanation is more akin to XI. 90-92. 90-92

(vi) Paccayto. This corresponds to XI. 111-12 though XI. 111-112 there is a wide divergence in details.

(vij) Lakkhanato. This corresponds to Vis. XI. 93. XI. 93 (viji) Sahhāga-visahhāgato. This corresponds to XI. 106 XI. 106

(viii) Sabhāga-visabhāgato. This corresponds to XI. 106.

We can trace a passage that corresponds to B.'s:

purimā dve garukattā sabhāgā, tathā pacchimā lahukattā.

XI. 95-96

(ix) Nānattekattato. This corresponds to B. XI. 95-96 and also includes B.'s classification of sangahato (XI. 108) Upa. adds much more to what is said in Vis.

(x) 以 觀 界 緣. Like a wooden doll, like a puppet that is painted, dressed up and worked by strings within, is our body. It is made of these four great elements and stirred up by the wind-element walks or stands, goes or comes, stretches itself or contracts itself, or speaks. The yogāvacara realises that there is no satta, no jīva, but merely 'name and form'. When he has delimited 'name and form' he knows the 'name and form' to be suffering, knows craving  $(tanh\bar{a})$  to be the cause of suffering, its cessation to be the cessation of suffering and the Eightfold Path to be the Path leading to the cessation of suffering. Thus, he sees into the Truths and sees danger in suffering. He has thoughts of anicca, dukkha and anattā. advantages into the cessation of suffering.

Upa. concludes this section thus: indrivesu, balesu, bojjhangesu susanthito hoti. Sankhāranimittā tassa cittam vuţthahati, amatadhātum sacchikaroti.

36. AHARE PATIKKULASANNA.

(i)

[Bk. 8.20.5—8.22.9; Tak. 440b.14—441a.10; Cf. B.XI.1-26.]

XI. 26

As usual Upa. gives the lakkhana, rasa, etc. He gives the eight anisamsas which are given in almost the same words as are used in B. XI. 26.

He must cultivate the reflection on the disgusting nature of the food that he eats, the food for which he has to go about searching. He must reflect upon this patikkūlatā in the following five ways: [Compare B. XI. 5, where B. mentions ten ways.]

XI. 5 diff.

以 紙 營 (?byāpārato). This seems to correspond to gamanato and pariyesanato of B. XI. 6-13. For the sake of food and drink, a man has to do many exit things. He has to leave sacred places and go for food through dirty roads to towns or villages.

XI. 6-13

- (ii) Paribhogato. This corresponds to Vis. XI. 14-16.
- (iii) Nidhānato. This corresponds to Vis. XI. 18.

XI. 14-16 XI. 18

- (iv) Nissandato. This corresponds to Vis. XI. 22-23. XI. 22-23 though Upa. introduces much that is new. p.a. compares the human body that is constantly oozing out to 'a broken jar in which wine is placed.' He also speaks of ninety--nine thousand pores of hair. One part of this nissanda is eaten up by worms, another is destroyed by fire, a third sustains the body, a fourth is turned into urine and a fifth into the trunk of the body.
- (v) 以 聚 (? accumulation). This seems to corres-XI. 21 pond to phalato of B. XI. 21. Many expressions are substantially the same.

In this way when the yogavacara has practised upon the patikkūlatā of āhāra, he is disgusted with food and gradually his mind becomes free from distraction, nīvaraṇas vanish, trancefactors appear and the upacārajjhāna is accomplished.

37. AKINCANNAYATANA.

These have been already described in the pathavī-kasiṇa.

38. NEVASANNANASANNAYATANA.

Upa. concludes with some verses which are not quite clear. There is a mention of the name of a country called Po-li-phu-to: 波利弗多 Pātaliputta.

Here end the Thirty-eight Kammatthanas.

CHAPTER IX

PANCA ABHINNA.

[Bk. 9.1.5—9.13a.3; Tak. 441a-444c. Cf. Vis. Chapters XII & XIII.]

The  $yog\bar{a}vacara$  having mastered  $sam\bar{a}dhi$  can produce in the fourth trance five miraculous powers  $(abhi\bar{n}\tilde{n}\hat{a})$ :

- (1) That of the body (corresponding to the iddhividha of B. XII. 2.
- (2) That of the divine ear (dibbasota).
- (3) That of knowing the minds of others (paracittavijānanā).
- (4) That of remembering past lives (pubbe-nivāsānussati).
- (5) That of divine eye (dibbacakkhu).

1. IDDHIVIDHA.

The miraculous power of the body means the power of effecting change or transformation. Upa. gives the interpretation of other miraculous powers also. Then he sets up the following questions:

(A) How many kinds of the power of transformation or iddhi are there?

In answer to the question (A) Upa, mentions adhitthanā iddhi,

- (B) Who practises them?
- (C) How can they be produced?

XII. 23-25

XII. 26-44

vikubbanā iddhi, and manomayā iddhi which alone are meant in this context, according to B. also (XII. 45). Upa. also later mentions the remaining seven iddhis as outlined by B. (XII. 26-44) from copious illustrative extracts from Ps. ii. 205-214 (iddhikathā). The explanation of these closely follows that of Ps. which is generally followed by B. also. The explanation of ariyā iddhi is given by Upa. in full following Ps. ii. 212-13. It is also worth noting that though Upa. gives generally all the names mentioned as illustrations of those persons who had attained iddhis, we do not find in his work the name of Mendaka in the list of names of persons given as illustrations of puñācata iddhi. Is it because his name is included under the mention of the pañca Mahāpuñāā arú so redundant?

1. Also given in Pet. 218-233 (Bur. Printed Text 119-20).

- (B) Taking ākāsa-kasiņa as the ninth or the fifth [kasiņa],1 one masters the fourth trance, or one attains the fourth rūnāvacara trance with some distinction, or one masters the fourth a second time and then one practises these iddhis.
- (C) In answer to the question as to how the iddhis can be produced. Upa. gives the same passage from Ps. ii. 205 as is XII. 50 given by B. in XII. 50: Idha bhikkhu chanda-samādhi- id. padhāna-sankhāra-samannāgatam iddhipādam bhāveti.... Upa. comments on this passage also. While commenting upon the word viriya he gives the fourfold formula of right exertion as given in Vibhanga 325-26, which is not given in this context either in Ps. or in Vis. The comment generally agrees with that of B.

Upa. gives three small separate sections to illustrate adhitthānā iddhi, manomayā iddhi and vikubbanā iddhi. He does this by giving the relevent passages from Ps. ii. 207-211. paragraphs 7-9. Upa, is as profuse as Ps, in the detailed description of adhitthana iddhi.

To illustrate the distinction between adhitthanā iddhi and vikubbanā iddhi, Upa. says: adhitthānāya iddhiyā pakativannam appahāya adhitthāti, vikubbanāya iddhiyā pakativannam vijahati.

PAKINNAKAKATHA

Upa. adds a small paragraph of pakinnakakathā in which he tells us that forms created by this miraculous power disappear at the end of the period of time set up previously by the iddhimā. If no such period is first delimited, then they may disappear as soon as he thinks so. He also says that a man created by this iddhi is without jīvitindriya. As the ārammapas of the iddhividha-ñana, he mentions nine:

> paritta, mahaggata, na vattabba: paccuppanna; atīta. anāgata, ajjhatta, bahiddhā. aiihattabahiddhā.

B. in XIII. 105 mentions twelve kinds of arammanas, of which he gives seven as applicable to this iddhividhañāna (XIII. 106). They are the same as those given by Upa. with XIII. 105 the exception that B. does not mertion na vattabba and s.d. ajjhattabahiddhā.

1. See p. 90 below.

2. DIBBASOTA

The same questions as in the first abhiāñā are set up. The yogāvacara having attained mastery in the four iddhipādas enters the fourth trance, gradually emerges from it and with his natural ear pays attention to sounds far and near, gross or fine, in one or the other direction. By practising in this way his mind gradually becomes pure and his sotadhātu also becomes pure and thus is transformed into heavenly ear with which he can hear sounds human and superhuman, far and near. Former teachers have said that this yogāvacara first hears the sounds of worms residing within his body. [Cf. sa-dehanissitā pāṇakasaddā of B. XIII. 3]. Then gradually he extends his sphere.

Upa. also points out another view according to which this ādikammika yogāvacara cannot first hear the sounds of worms residing within his body. He cannot hear the fine sounds which cannot become the objects of his natural ear. Upa.'s treatment is generally the same as B's, with some slight variations, as when he gives three ārammaṇas only, paritta, paccuppanna and bahiddhā, while B. gives four adding ajjhatta to the three given here. [See B. XIII. 109.] Upa. adds that if the natural ear is lost, the divine ear also is lost. One can hear the sound in a thousand world-systems (lokadhātū), the paccekabuddhas in still more, and the Tathagatas in countless ones.

XIII. 109 s.d.

3. PARACITTAVIJANANA.

With mastery in the fourth trance with ālokakasiņa, and with the divine eye produced, one knows the mind of others. The yogāvacara having practised the four iddhipādas attains mastery over his mind and purifies it. With ālokakasiņa he attains the fourth trance and gradually emerges from it. He pervades his body with light, and, with the divine eye, sees the colour of his mind or heart, and knows its nature from the colour.

XIII. 9 q.d. If there is somanassindriya, the colour is like that of dadhi or naswata

If there is domanassi driya, the colour is purple.

If there is upekkhindriya, the colour is like that of honey.

If there is lobha, the colour is yellow.

If there is dosa, the colour is black.

If there is moha, the colour is muddy or turbid.

If there is saddhā and ñāṇa, the colour is [spotless] pure (suddha).

[Vis. XIII. 9 mentions only the first three cases of these and his remarks are: rattam nigrodhapakkasadisam, kālakam jambupakkasadisam and pasannatilatelasadisam.]

Having thus understood the changes of colour in his own XIII. 11 self, he should pervade the bodies of others with light and notice the colour of the mind or heart of others. Gradually he should leave the colours and know the heart itself. Then by this practice he comes to know whether a mind is sa-raga or vitaraga, sa-dosa or vitadosa, and so on. [Cf. B. XIII. 11]. This cetopariyañāna has eight ārammanas which are the same as are given by B. in XIII. 110.

XIII, 11 p. id.

The mind which is free from asavas cannot be known by an ordinary man (puthujjana). The mind of a being in the arūapāvacara sphere can be known only by the Buddhas. As in the last section, here also Upa. adds that one can know the minds in a thousand world-systems (lokadhātā), the paccekabuddhas in still more, and the Tathagatas in innumerable ones.

4. PUBBENIVASANUSSATI.

Upa. gives three kinds of pubbenivāsānussati, by the first of XIII. 27 which he can at the most recall only seven lives, and by the diff. second only fourteen, and by the third he can only practise the iddhipādas. [With this compare B. XIII. 27 where we find B. mentioning parikammasamādhināņa or as some would call it atītamsa-ñāṇa, which properly speaking is not pubbenivāsānussati.l

The method of producing this kind of miraculous power is XIII. 22-25 the same as is given by B. in XIII. 22-25. If he is not able to produce this power he should not give up efforts. He should again attain the trance. Upa. gives the simile of a mirror which we often find used in Buddhist books. If you cannot see your face in a mirror you do not throw away the mirror but rub it again and again until you are able to see your face in it. B. has used this simile in another place [XVIII. 16], though here he uses quite different similes. Upa. refers to Ayasınā Sobhita who was considered as the chief among those who remembered the past lives. [See A. i. 25. B. does not refer to him.]

XIII. 15-18

We have a passage which corresponds to B.'s XIII. 15-18. Upa. also speaks of the Titthiyas who can remember only forty kappas. Upa. very concisely states the case of Sammāsambuddhas who can recall the past lives and actions of others as well as their own; they can also recall places. Others can recall their own actions only and little of others. The Sammāsambuddhas can recall everything as they please, while others can do so only in succession (paṭipāṭi). The Sammāsambuddhas may or may not enter upon samādhi for recalling the past lives. Even if they do not enter they can recall, while others can do so only by entering upon samādhi.

5. DIBBACAKKHU.

XIII. 73 s.d.

This miraculous power is obtained by one who has attained mastery in the fourth trance with alokakasina as the ninth or the fifth [kasina]1, and by one who has a natural eye (i. e. unimpaired). It is of two kinds: (i) kammaphalavipākanibbattam, and (ii) bhāvanānibbattam. [Compare sucaritakammanibbattam and viriyabhāvanābalanibbattam of B. XIII. 73]. first, one can see whether a treasure-box does contain any treasure or not. Having attained mastery over the four iddhipādas, he attains the fourth trance in the ālokakasiņa, has ālokasaññā, makes no distinction between day and night and finds no obstacle for his mind. His mind knows no darkness. He is above day-light. Gradually, by this practice he attains dibbacakkhu. Here we have also the passage which is commented upon by B. in XIII. 73-77: So dibbena cakkhunā visuddhena atikkantamānusakena satte passati cavamāne upapajjamāne, hīne paņīte, suvaņņe dubbaņņe, sugate duggate, yathā-kammūpage sabbasatte.... Upa. does not comment upon this passage. When a yogāvacara is thus able to produce the dibbacakkhu, he must have the kilesas destroyed. If he does not destroy the kilesas and if he has the dibbacakkhu, he falls from samādhi. If he falls from samādhi, his āloka vanishes, and the forms seen by him also disappear. [Cf. B. XIII. 96: tato āloko antaradhāyati, tasmim antarahite rupagatam pi na dissati]. Among the kilesas mentioned, we find vicikicchā, micchānussati, thīnamiddha, māna, pāpikā vācā, samphappalāpa, nānattasañña, and so on. After the kilesas are destroyed, if he cannot obtain mastery over the trance, his dibbacakkhu is low, the āloka is low, and the forms seen by him are also low.

1. See p. 87 above.

Upa. mentions five arammanas: paritta, paccuppanna, aiihatta, bahiddhā, and ajjhattabahiddhā, while B. mentions only four omitting the last from the above list. He further XIII. 103 says that from this dibbacakkhu are produced the four kinds of diff. knowledge: (i) anāgatamsañāna, (ii) kammassakatañāna, (iii) yathākammūpagañāņa, (iv) and kammavipākaphalañāņa. [With this compare B. XIII, 103, where B. mentions only two kinds: anāgatamsañāņa and yathākammūpagañāņa.]

PAKINNAKAKATHA

Upa. also adds pakinnakakathā, in which he says that if the yogāvacara practises samādhi with the intention of seeing or hearing, he sees or hears. If he has both the intentions, he both sees and hears. And if he practises with the intention of seeing and hearing, as well as, knowing the minds of others. he can do all the three.

Lokiya abhiññas are sāsavā, rūpapatibaddhā and pothujja- N.C. nikā. If they are kusalā, they are sekhiyā and pothujjanikā. Those of Arhats are abyākatā.

These abhiññas are not produced in the arūnāvacara loka.

CHAPTER X

PANNAPARICCHEDA

[Bk. 9.13a. 5-9.17.5. Tak. 444c-445c. Cf. B. XIV. 1-31]

As usual, Upa. gives the lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc. Upa. agrees with B. in his statement regarding lakkhaṇa, and paccupaṭṭhāna only. The ānisaṃsas are innumerable but they should be known in brief. He gives them in several gāthās in addition to the eleven ānisaṃsas which he mentions later. Regarding lakkhaṇa, rasa, etc., he also gives another alternative as follows: Vijjālakkhaṇā, saddhammappavesarasā, avijjandhakāra-viddhaṃsana-paccupaṭṭhānā, catupaṭisaṃbhidā-padaṭṭhānā. To explain paññā, Upa. gives a passage which is substantially the same as is given in Dhs. para. 16 [also cf. paragraphs 20, 555.]: Paññā, pajānanā, vicayo, pavicayo, dhamṃavicayo......etc.

When Upa. comes to the answer of the question 'katividhā  $pa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}\tilde{a}$ ' he starts with

CHAPTER XI

PANCA UPAYA

PART ONE

[Bk. 10-1.5-10, 22a. 4; Tak. 445c-451c. Cf. Vis. Chapters XIV, XV, XVII.]

The  $yog\bar{a}vacara$  wishing to be free from old age and death, wishing to get rid of the cause of birth and death and the darkness of ignorance, wishing to cut off the strings of craving and to attain the  $ariy\bar{a}$   $pa\tilde{n}\tilde{n}\bar{a}$ , should find the means  $(up\bar{a}y\bar{a})$  in five things: Khandhās, āyatanas, dhātus, hetupaccayas (or nidānas) and ariyasaccas.

1. KHANDHA

The khandhas are five:  $r\bar{u}pa$ ,  $vedan\bar{a}$ ,  $sa\tilde{n}n\bar{a}$ , sankhara and  $vi\tilde{n}n\bar{a}na$ .

RUPA

What is rūpakkhandha? cattāro ca mahābhūtā, catunnañ ca mahābhūtānam upādāya rūpam.

Upa. explains the four mahābhūtas as explained already by him in Catudhātuvavatthānam (p. 83). Under the  $up\bar{a}d\bar{a}r\bar{u}pa$ , he gives a list of twenty-six things which are the same as are given by B. in XIV. 36, except that there is an addition of two:  $j\bar{a}tir\bar{u}pa$  and  $middhar\bar{u}pa$ . Thus Upa. says that the rūpas are thirty in all.

XIV. 36 diff.

[B. in XIV 71 emphatically rejects¹ any addition to his number, twenty-eight. He does refer among other rupas, to these two rupas, but he says that jātirūpa is included under rūpassa upacaya and rūpassa santati [also see XIV. 66], and middha-rūpa² which is advocated by some (ekaccānam matena) is rejected by the Atthakathās on the authority of the following quotation from Sn. 541: addhā munī'si sambuddho, natthi nīvaranā tava. Dhammapāla in his comment on the word ekaccānam says Abhayagirivāsīnam. Buddhaghosa is very emphatic when he states: middharūpam tāva natthi yevā ti paṭikkhittam and iti aṭṭhavīsatividhim rūpam hoti anūnam anadhikam.]

XIV. 71 combats this view.

- 1. See also Abhm. p. 72, AbhmV. p. 30 which support B.
- 2. See pp. 48, 123.

XIV. 42

In the upādārūpas, Upa. gives the words cakkhāyatana, sotāyatana, ghāṇāyatana etc. instead of B.'s cakkhu, sota, ghāṇa, etc. While explaining these organs of sense, Upa. refers to the various views about the same, among which he refers to one expressed by B. in XIV. 42: apare tejādhikānaṃ pasādo cakkhu, vivara-vāyu-āpa-pathvādhikānaṃ sota-ghāna-jivhā-kāyā ti vadanti. In the description of the cakkhāyatana, Upa. speaks of the three circles of the eye and the five layers of maṃsa, lohita, vāyu, semha, and kheļa within which it lies. The description of the cakkhuppasāda is given by B. [XIV. 48] in these words:

XIV. 48 almost id.

Upa. also like B. ascribes this quotation to Sāriputta and his quotation is the same except that instead of  $\bar{u}k\bar{a}sira$  of B. he uses the word  $\bar{u}k\bar{a}$ .

Upa. gives a very clear distinction between the mahābhūtas and the  $up\bar{a}d\bar{a}$  rūpas. The former depend upon one another and are produced all together; the latter are produced relying upon the former. The latter are not depended upon by the former, nor do the latter depend upon one another among themselves. This is beautifully illustrated by a simile. The mahābhūtas are like three sticks reclining upon one another. The  $\bar{u}p\bar{a}d\bar{a}$  rūpas are like the shadows of the three sticks. [10.3.6-7, Tak. 446b. 3-4].

The yogāvacara should understand these thirty rūpas in the following five ways:

N.C.

N.C.

- (i) Samuṭṭhānto. As they arise from kamma, utu, citta, āhāra, taken singly or in combination with one another. Upa. gives all details. (Cf. with this Abhs. VIth chapter, para. 6, pp. 28-29.)
- (ii) Kalāpato. Upa. refers to the various groups, such as cakkhudasaka, sotadasaka, itthindriyadasaka, vatthudasaka. jīvitindriyanavaka and so on, He knows how many of these are kammasamuṭṭānā, cittasamuṭṭhānā and so on. [Cf. Abhs. VI. 8, p.29]. To describe the cakkhusantati, Upa. gives the simile of the flow of a stream or the flame of a lamp. [Cf. Abhs. VI. 10:

  - Nānattato. (iv)
    - (a) Duvidham: olārika, sukhuma; ajjhatta, bahiddhā; jīvitindriya, a-jīvitindriya. Upa. gives the enumeration of the rupas classified under these headings.
    - (b) Tividham: upādinna, and vikāra XIV. 74 (or pabheda)-rūpa ( 壞色); sanidassana-sappaṭigha, anidassana-sappatigha, and anidassana-appatigha.2 [See B. XIV. 74].
    - (c) Catubbidhaṃ: sabhāva, ākāra (形 seems to be used for ākārā-vikāra), lakkhana, and pariccheda.
  - (v) Ekattato. Sabbam rūpam na hetu ahetukam hetuvippayuttam.....

XIV. 72

[The same passage from Dhs. p.124-25, paragraph 584, quoted by B. in XIV. 72 is given here, with a slight variation in the order of the words.

Upa. also further says that when taken in detail they are one hundred and eight. He also shows how we get that number.

SANKHARA

XIV. 133-184 much diff. Upa. gives a long list of thirty-two sankhāras and adds at the end: vedanāsaññāvivajjitā sabbe cetasikā dhammā sankhāradhammo. In this list we find citta² and 溢

- 1. Cf. Vis. XVII. 228 where we have 89 kinds of sensation.
- 2. This word seem? to be used for saddhā as it is explained as cittassa pasādanam.

nīvaranas. On the other hand, there are some from B.'s list in the XIV. 133-184, which we do not find in Upa.'s list. Each of this list is explained by Upa. by similes many of which are very appropriate. For instance, phassa is likened to the light of the sun striking the wall, adhimokkha to water flowing on to a lower level, viriya to a strong bull able to carry a burden, ditthi to a blind man touching and feeling an elephant, anottappa to a wicked king who fears nobody. Another simile is also to be noted. A hirika is likened to a Candala and along N.C. with anottappa is said to be agaravapadatthana.

VINNANA

Upa. gives only seven kinds of viññāṇas: cakkhuviññāṇa, XIV. 88sota-viññāna, ghāna-viññāna, jivhā-viññāna, kāya-viññāna, mano-viññāṇa and manodhātu-viññāna. One should understand these viññānas in three ways:

124 altogether

- (i) Vathārammanato: the five viññānas have separate vatthus and separate arammanas, while manodhatu and manoviññānadhātu have the same vatthu, though the former has five arammanas while the latter has six. Upa. goes into many more minute details such as the internal or external vatthu or ārammaņa, etc.
- (ii) Arammanato: several details are given which are not quite clear.
- (iii) Dhammato: the association with different viññanas of one or more of the following: vitakka, vicāra, pīti, sukha, dukkha, domanassa, upekkhā, etc.

The Section closes with a passage which is the same as is given at the end of the section on rupa [ Dhs. para. 584. See above p. 971.

As a general concluding summary of the treatment of all the five khandhas, Upa. says that we must understand them from the following four points of view:

- (i) Vacantthato. The words for each of the five khandhas and the word khandha itself are interpreted. The interpretation of these words appears to be the same as is given by B. except in the case of the word  $r\bar{u}pa$ .
- (ii) Lakkhanato. The characteristics of Each of the khandhas are given. Rūpa, vedanā, etc. are respectively compared to a thorn that pricks, the disease of leprosy, a maker of images, the turning of a wheel and knowing the taste.

XIV. 214, 219 p.a.

(iii) Paricchedato.

Pañca khandhā: sabbe dhammā.
Pañca upādānakkhandhā: sabbe sāsavā dhammā.

Pañca dhammakkhandhā: Sīlakkhandho, samādhikkhandho, paññākhandho, vimutti kkhandho, vimuttiñāṇakkhandho.

[Cf. B XIV, 214, 219.]

(iv) Sangahato. All the khandhas are classified under the headings of āyatana, dhātu and sacca with a detailed enumeration.

2. AYATANANI

[Bk. 10, 12a, 4-10, 16, 5; Tak. 448c, -449c, Cf. Vis, XV, 1-16.]

XV. 1

q.d.

Upa. gives the same twelve āyatanas as are given by B. in XV. 1 and gives the interpretation and explanation of each of them. His interpretation is more simple and more natural than that of B. He does not give the artificial interpretation as B. gives of the words cakkhu, sadda, jivhā or kāya. He interprets the word cakkhāyatana as the dhātupasāda by which one sees forms, jivhā as the dhātupasāda by which one knows the taste, kāya as that by which one touches. He explains the word manāyatana, as sattaviñāāṇadhātuyo, and the dhammāyatana as tayo arūpino khandhā, aṭṭhārasa sukhuma-rūpāni, nibbānañ ca.

These ayatanas should be understood in five ways:

XV. 3-7 q.d. (i) Vacanatthato. Upa interpretes the words cakkhu, sota, etc. as well as the word āyatana. He interprets the word dhamma as without life (nijjīvam), and āyatana as arūpadhamma-dvāra-vatthu-adhiṭṭāna. No artificial interpretation of that word as given by B. is found here.

XIV. 46

- (ii) Visayato. The eye and the ear do not come into contact with their objects, while the nose, tongue and the body do. [Cf. B. XIV. 46.] Upa. Plso refers to an alternative view of some people who believe that the eye and the ear do come into contact with their objects, and their argument is that a magic N.C. incantation will be heard unless there is some obstacle, which N.C. is very close to the ear. Similarly, the eye must be reaching the object. For, beyond the wall one cannot see. [That is to say it cannot reach the object and so it cannot see.]
- 1. Dhammapāla in his comment on this (p. 509) says: Sotam pi sampatta-visayaggāhī ti ke ci.

(iii) Paccayato. [This corresponds to B. XV. 35-39.]

XIV. 35-39

Here we find a passage corresponding to what is ascribed by B. to former teachers (pubbācariya). From this B. quotes in brief in XV. 39. The passage given by Upa. is fuller and treats of the same subject. Therein it is shown that cakkhuviññāna tion in arises because of cakkhu, rūpa, āloka and manasikāra.1 This passage agrees with that in B. except in the last two cases of kāyaviññāna and manoviññāna. In the former case, Upa. drops the word pathavī from B.'s list, while, in the latter case, he gives mana, dhamma, adhimokkha, manasikāra instead of B.'s s.d. bhavangamana, dhamma, manasikāra. Upa. goes then into the detailed explanation of these terms.

Quota-XV. 39 in a fuller form.

(iv) Vithibhedato. [This corresponds to B.'s XIV. 115- XIV. 115-123.1

q.d.

Upa. speaks of the three kinds of vīthi which corresponds to mahanta, paritta, atiparitta, and mentions the seven kinds of cittas in the mahantavīthi. He further gives a very beautiful simile to illustrate the different stages in the process of cognition by the eye. A king is sleeping in his palace2 and the N.C. queen and a dumb maid-servant are there in attendance, the maid-servant shampooing the feet of the king. The gates of the palatial structure (town, as Upa. puts it) are closed and are guarded by a deaf man. The gardener of the king comes to the gate with a mango-fruit ( 菴 樂 果 ) in his hand with the intention of presenting it to the king. He finds the door closed and knocks at it. The king hears the sound and wakes up. He orders the dumb woman in attendance to have the door opened. She instructs the deaf door-keeper, by means of signs, to open the door. The door is opened and the king sees the fruit, takes

The courtiers take the fruit to the queen who washes it, and seeing whether it is ripe or unripe, gives a piece to each of the courtiers and then finally gives it to the king. The king tastes the fruit and praises or condemns it, as the case may be, after he has eaten it and then goes back to sleep.

<sup>1.</sup> The meaning of this expression is not clear. Evidently this stage corresponds to bhavangy-calana and bhavanga-upaccheda. Set Vis. XIV.115 and Abhs. IV.3, pp. 16-17.

Upa. also further speaks of the other vithis as well as that in the manodvāra.

(v) Sangahato. Upa. tells us how these ayatanas can be distributed under the classifiction of the khandhas, dhatus and saccas.

3. DHATUS

[Bk 10.16.6-10.17.2: Tak. 449c-450a. Cf. Vis. XV. 17 to the end of XVth Chap.]

Upa. gives the same eighteen kinds of dhātus¹ given by B. in XV. 17. He explains those terms. There is so much matter in this section that is found in the last section as well.

These dhammas are called khandhas because they are grouped together, āyatanas because they are  $dv\bar{a}ralakkhan\bar{a}$ , and dhātus because they are  $sabh\bar{a}valakkhan\bar{a}$ . [Cf. Vis. XV. 21: attuno  $sabh\bar{a}vam$   $dh\bar{a}rent\bar{i}$  ti  $dh\bar{a}tuyo$ .]

Upa. gives a quotation ascribed to the Blessed One which purports to say that a man of keen intellect speaks of the Truth of Suffering with the help of khandhas, a man of medium intellect speaks with the help of ayatanas, and a man of dull intellect with the help of dhatus.

4. HETUPACCAYĀ(因 綠)

[Bk. 10.17.3-10.23a.4; (end of Bk. 10); Tak. 450c; Cf. B. XVIIth Chap.]

[It is difficult to say what the original expression for 因終 might have been. For, the same characters are used for nidāna, paṭiccasamuppāda and hetu-paccaya. (See My. 229, 9210, 2241, 2267). So these characters may as well have been used for nidānas.

It may be noted that Upa. gives the section on Hetupaccayas which corresponds to B.'s on Paţiccasamuppāda before the section on saccas, an order which is just the epposite of B.'s.]

We find here the same passage from S. ii. 1. as is quoted by B. in Vis. XVII. 2: Avijjāpaccayā sankhārā, sankhārapaccayā viññānam, etc. We also meet with another passage which gives the negative side of the same formula. Avijjānirodhā sankhāranirodho, sankhāranirodhā viññānanirodho, etc. [Cf. S. ii. 4.] B. does not give this passage.

1 With this compare Sph. 58-59. (comment on stanza 27).

N.C.

Upa.'s explanation of these words is quite simple and savours of no scolasticism of B. He also gives a protracted simile to explain the inter-relation of the twelve factors of the Law of Causation—the simile of the seed growing into a tree and then into a seed again.

Here are given below the twelve factors with their explanation and illustration:—

Factors	Explanation	Illustration
$Avijjar{a}$ :	catūsu saccesu aññāṇaṃ;	is compared to 穀 paddy (vīhi).
Sankhārā:	kāya-vacīcittakammāni;	are compared to a seed $(b\bar{\imath}ja)$ .
Viññāṇaṃ:	paţisandhikkhane pavattitam cittam;	is compared to a sprout (ankura).
$N$ āmar $ar{u}$ pa $ar{m}$ :	cittacetasikā dhammā, kalalarūpañ ca;	is compared to a leaf (patta).1
Saļāyatanam :	cha ajjhatika-āyatanāni;	is compared to a branch (sākhā).
Phasso:	cha phassakāyā;	is compared to a tree (rukkha).
Vedanā:	cha vedanākāyā;	is compared to a flower (puppham).
$Tanhar{a}$ :	cha taṇhākāyā;	is compared to juice (rasa).
$Upar{a}dar{a}nar{a}m:$	cattāri upādānāni;	is compared to [the ear of] rice (sāli or tandula).
Bhavo:	kāma-rūpa-arūpabhava- samuṭṭhāpakaṃ kammaṃ;	is compared to a seed $(bija)$ again.
Jāti:	bhave khandhābhinibbati;	is compared to a sprout (ankura).
$Jarar{a}$ :	khandhānam paripāko;	for this no simile is used.
${\it Maranam}:$	khandhānam viddhamsana- paribhedo;	for this no simile is used.

Upa. shows by this simile that this is a round of which the beginning or the end is not known. B. gives no such one simile for the whole. In XVII. 303, where B. gives different similes for the different factors, he uses the simile of a  $b\bar{\imath}ja$  and ankura for bhava and  $j\bar{a}ti$ .

Upa. also raises the question:  $kimpaccay\bar{a}$  avijjā? In answer he says:

- (i) avijjā yeva avijjā-paccayo.1 And further he says that
- (ii) all kilesas also are the paccayas of avijjā and to support his statement he gives the quotation: āsavasamudayā avijjā-samudayo. [Cf. B. XVII. 36, quoting from M. i. 54.]

Upa, then raises some ten questions which he briefly answers. Of these twelve factors, avijjā, tanhā and upādāna are the three kilesas, sankhārā and bhava are the two kammas and the remaining seven are vipākas. Avijjā and sankhārā are in the past, jāti and jarā-marana are in the future, while the rest are in the present. [With this compare B. XVII, 284, 287 which is exactly the same.] This succession of old-age and death should be known to be without a beginning. These twelve dhammas, because they are the causes of one another in succession, are the hetupaccaya-samuppāda or paticcasamuppāda. The difference between the twelve hetupaccaya-angani and samuppannadhammā is that the hetupaccayas are the different kinds of sankhāras about which, when they have not yet come into existence, we cannot say that they are sankhata or asankhata; while they come into existence, they become the hetupaccayadhammā or paticca-samuppādadhammā (? 以起 因 綠 法行);2 when they have already come into existence they are sankha-Upa, also speaks of the hetupaccayas as gambhīrasabhā $ta.^3$ [Cf. B. XVII. 11, 304-314.] vā.

XVII. 284, 287

Further these hetupaccayas should be known in seven ways:

(i) Sandhito. There is one sandhi between sankhāras and viññāṇa, another between vedanā and taṇhā and the third between bhava and jāti. [Cf. Vis. XVII. 288-89.] B. speaks of hetuphalasandhi, phalahetusandhi, and hetuphalasandhi. Upa. calls the first and the third sandhis hetuphalasandhi and bhavasandhi, while the second is phalahetusandhi and not bhavasandhi. Upa. goes into a long discussion of the bhavasandhi and describes how one individual passes from one existence to another. In that consection he speaks of kamma,

XVII. 155-56 kammanimitta, gati and gatinimitta, while B. speaks of only three with the omission of gati. [Cf. B. XVII. 136-45.] We also meet with here [Vim. 10.21.4] the famous simile in Buddist literature,—the simile of one lamp kindling another lamp. There is also a description as to how the material form [of an individual] is produced. [Cf. Vis. XVII. 155-56]

XVII. 290 diff.

(ii) Catusankhepato. This corresponds to B.'s XVII. 290 although we do not find there the terms used by Upa., namely—atītakammakilesa, paccuppannaphalavipāka, paccuppannakamma-kilesa, and anāgataphalavipāka.

XVII. 291-97 s.a.

(iii) Visatiya ākārehi. This is in substantial agreement with B.'s XVII. 291-97, although Upa. is very brief. We find in this connection the quotations from Ps. i. 52, given by B. in XVII. 292, 296, 297. There seems to be something wrong with the Chinese Text, for instead of the closing line in the quotation in the para. 292, we have the closing line of the quotation in the para. 294, but the whole passage corresponding to the quotation in para. 294 is missing. Similarly, there is some variation in the last quotation.

XVII. 298 q.d.

- (iv) Cakkato. Avijjāpaccayā sankhārā...jātipaccayā jarāmaraṇaṃ. Evam etassa kevalassa dukkhakhandhassa samudayo hoti. It is ignorance of this heap of suffering that is avijjā. And from avijjā there arise sankhāras and so on. [Cf. B. XVII. 298, which is quite different.]
- (v) 以奉(?). Avijjā leading forward to the future and jarā-maraņa in the other direction to the past.

  - (a) Duvidha:

Lokiya: that avijjā is at the beginning;

Lokuttara: that dukkha depends upon dukkha, saddhā upon saddhā, and so on.

[Does this correspond to the quotation from Ptn. given by B. in

XVII. 84 ?]

(b) Catubbidha:

kammę ilesato hetu: as avijjā is at the beginning.

bijato hetu:

bhava-nikanti (有作): 如化色 like opapātikarūpa (?). 共業為因 As in things born together, (? sahajāta-kamma-hetu) as the earth and snow, mountain and ocean, the sun and moon.

(vii) Lakkhaṇasangahato: the twelve factors are distri- N.C. buted over the classification of being characterised as khandhas, āyatanas, dhātus and saccas; as, for instance, so many of the twelve factors are included in the sankhārakkhandha and so on. In the same way with the rest.

CHAPTER XI

PAÑCA UPAYA

PART TWO

[Bk. 11.1.5.—11.6a. 8; Tak. 452a-452b; Cf. Vis. XVI. 13—end of the Chap.]

5. SACCANI

Cattāri ariyasaccāni: dukkham, dukkha-samudayo, dukkha-nirodho, dukhha-nirodha-maggo.

XVI. 31-60 g.a.

These four truths are described in the same words from Vibhanga as are quoted by B. in XVI. 31. The comment on the text of the First Truth: Jāti pi dukkhā, jarā pi dukkhā, ......sankhittena pañca upādānakkhandhā dukkhā, generally agrees—although it is very brief—with that of B. XVII. 31-60, except in a few cases, as on the word jarā. Upa's comment on that word, if rendered in Pali, would be as follows: Dhātūnam paripākabhāvā bala-rūpa-indriya-sati-paññānam hāni.

After giving the comment on this textual passage, Upa. proceeds to the classification of dukkha. It is vatthudukkha: jātidukkham, maraņadukkham, appiyānam sampayogo, piyānam vippayogo, yam pi iccham na labhati tam pi dukkham, sankhittena pañca upādānakkhandhā dukkhā.

(a) Duvidha:

sabhāvadukkham: sokadukkham, parideva-dukkham, domanassa-dukkham, upāyāsa-dukkham.

XVI. 35 (b) Tividha:

viparināmavatthu.
sankhāradukkham: pañca upādanakkhas.dhā.

Kāyikam, cetasikam.

Abhk.
VII.78]

The comment on the text of the Second Truth generally agrees with that of B. XVI. 61. With reference to the Third Truth, Upa. is very concise. He merely gives the text and gives no comment on it. He gives no discussion on Nibbāna as B. gives in XVI. 67-70. He, however, like B. XVI. 63, states that the Blessed One preached about the Cessation of Suffering by way of the Cessation of the Origin of Suffering.

When Upa. comes to the Fourth Truth he explains the Eightfold Path with two alternative interpretations of each of these factors of the Path. His interpretation often differs from p.a. that of B. [XVI. 75-83]. Here it follows:

XVI. 75-83 p.a.

Sammā-diṭṭhi: Catusaccesu ñāṇaṃ; Nibbāṇe ñāṇadassanaṃ. Sammā-san- tividha-kusala-san- Nibbāṇe sankappo.

kappo: kappo;

Sammā-vācā; catubbidhā pāpaca- micchā vācāya pahāritā virati; nam.

Sammā-kam- tividhā pāpacaritā micchā kammassa manto: virati; pahānam.

Sammā-ājīvo: micchājīvā virati; micchājīvassa pahānam. Sammā-vāyāmo: cattāri sammappa- micchā viriyassa dhānāni; pahānam.

Sammā-sati: cattāri satipatthā- Nibbāne sati.

nāni:

Sammā-samādhi: cattāri jhānāni; Nibbāņe cittekaggatā.

Then he goes on to show how the Noble Eightfold Path covers all the thirty-seven bodhidhammas. [Cf. Vis. XVII. 86 and XXII. 33-38.]

Upa. raises the same question as is raised by B. in XVI. 27, XVI. 27-28 as to why these Truths are just four, neither three nor five. P.a. The answer of Upa. agrees in general with that of B. in the first half of XVI. 28. B. gives several other reasons in addition to the two of Upa.

These Truths should be understood in eleven ways:

- (i) Vacanatthato. Upa. gives the interpretations of the XVI. 22 words ariya-sacca, dukkha, samudaya, nirodha and magga. His interpretations are, as usual, more simple and more natural. [This corresponds to B. XVI. 16-22].
- (ii) Lakkhanato. This corresponds to B. XVI. 23, where XVI. 23 B. also gives rasa, and paccuapatthāna. Upa. agrees with B. p.a. only in part.
- (iii) Kamato. [compare B. XVI. 29, 30.] Upa. gives two XVI. 29-30 reasons of which only the first olarikatthena is common with that of B.'s olarikatta. The second reason given by Upa. is sacchikātabbatthena. Upa. gives a very fine simile to illustrate the appropriateness of the order of these Truths. Just as a skilful physician first sees the symptoms of a disease, then hears the cause of it, and then seeing the necessity of the cure of the disease prescribes a suitable medicine; so the four Truths may be known as coming in the same order.

XVI. 85 p.a.

(iv) Sankhepato. There does not appear to be any paragraph in Vis. except a part of XVI. 85, which expresses an idea similar to that expressed in the last of the three cases under this heading. Upa. explains in the first two cases the denotation of these Truths and in the last case he tells what these Truths can accomplish. Concerning the last he says: Dukkham sakkāyadiṭṭhidvāra-pidahanasamattham, samudayo ucchedadiṭṭhidvāra-pidahanasamattho, nirodho sassatadiṭṭhidvāra-pidapanasamattho, maggo micchādiṭṭhidvāra-pidahanasamttho. [Cf.B. XVI. 85 where instead of micchādiṭṭhi B. has akiriya-diṭṭhi.

XVI. 87

- (v) Upamāto. We find here the similes of visarukkha, orimatīra and of bhāra as given in B. XVI. 87, where B. gives several others in addition.
  - (vi) Paricchedato.

Cattāri saccāni: Sammuti-saccaṃ, pacceka-saccaṃ (? 各 答 論) paramattha-saccaṃ, ariya-saccaṃ.

Here it is the last that is meant.

XVI. 86

- (vii) Gaṇanāto. This corresponds, in part only, to B. XVI. 86. There B. gives the various dhammas that are included under the Four Truths. Upa. gives the various alternatives of the different dhammas that are covered by the first two Truths, while the last two are invariably the cessation of what is included under the second, and the way to the cessation of the same, respectively.
  - (viii) Ekattato. This is given to be of four kinds:
    saccatthato, avitathatthato [Cf. XVI. 102], dhammatthato, suññtatthato [Cf. Vis. XVI. 90].
  - (ix) Nānattato.
    - (A) Duvidha:

CHAPTER XII

SACCAPARICCHEDO

PART ONE

[Bk. 11.6a.9—11.19a.8 (end of Bk. 11); Tak. 453b-456c; Cf. Vis. Chapters XVIII, XIX, XX in part and XXI. 1-28].

DIŢŢĦIVISUDDHI

The yogāvacara, when he has understood the khandhas, dhātus, āyatanas, hetupaccayas and saccas, should know that there exist these things only and that there is no satta, no jīva, that there are only  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$ , that one does not consist of the other, and yet one is not independent of the other. [Compare Vis. XVIII. 33, 32: Nāmam rūpena suññam, rūpam nāmena suññam; aññamaññam nissayeva pavattati. To illustrate this nature of  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$ , Upa. has given here the simile of a drum and sound, as well as that of a blind man and a lame man. These similes are given in full in Vis. XVIII. 33, 35.] Upa. dilates much upon the distinction between  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$ . The former has no body, is flighty and very easy to move, while the latter has body, and slow to The former can think, know and understand, while the latter cannot do so. The former can know 'I walk, sit, stand or lie down,' although it cannot do so itself. The rūpa alone can do these movements. Similarly nāma cannot do the actions of eating, drinking, tasting, etc. which can be done by the  $r\bar{u}pa$ alone, but it can know 'I eat, drink, taste, etc.' Thus he knows that it is only the sankhāras that exist, and they are nothing but suffering. When he has this insight into suffering (dukkhe)ñāṇam), there is yathābhūta-ñāṇadassana-visuddhi, or nāmarūpa-vavatthānam. [Cf. B. XVIII. 37, XX 130].

KANKHAVITARANA-VISUDDHI

Even after this if the yogāvacara has still any thought about satta, he should further reflect upon the causes (nidāna) of suffering. He should reflect upon the Law of Causation, or of Dependent Origination, both in the regular order as well as in the reverse order. He may reflect upon this Law of Dependent Origination in full, or, even in brief, beginning with vedanāpaccyā taṇhā [Cf. Vis. XVII. 28, 30, 32, 37, 41]. Thus

XVIII. 32,

Similes in XVIII. 33, 35

N.C.

XIX XIVth ch. diff. he has an insight into the origin of suffering (dukkha-samudaye  $\tilde{n}\tilde{a}\tilde{n}am$ ), which is the same as dhammaṭṭhiti $\tilde{n}\tilde{a}\tilde{n}am$  or hetupaccayapariggahe  $\tilde{n}\tilde{a}nam$ , or kankhāvitaraṇavisuddhi. All these expressions mean the same thing though they are different in words. [Cf. Vis. XIX. 25-26.]

When the yogāvacara has thus understood the Origin of Suffering, he further reflects upon the Cessation of Suffering. By reflecting upon the Law of Dependent Origination in the negative way, that is to say, that the cessation of suffering is possible by the cessation of birth, and so on, up to that the cessation of sankhāras is possible by the cessation of ignorance (avijjā), he sees that Nirodha also is hetupaccaya-patibaddha, and that by the cessation of craving (tanhā), it can be attained. When he has thus realized the Truth of the Cessation of Suffering. he tries to find out the Path for the cessation of craving. He knows that seeing danger in the five upādānakkhandhas is the Way, the Path.

He then reflects upon the upādānakkhandhas in one hundred and eighty ways. Upon  $r\bar{u}pa$  for instance he reflects in this way:

Atthi rūpam atītam, anāgatam, paccuppamnam, ajjhattam, bahiddhā, mahantam, parittam, olārikam, sukhumam, dūre, santike, sabbam rūpam aniccan ti passati. [This is the same quotation from Ps. i. 53-4 as is given in B. XX. 6.] In the same way he reflects upon the other four khandhas. Thus there would be 12 multiplied by 5 i.e. 60 kinds of reflections. Add to these, 60 in each of the other two reflections by way of dukkha and anattā. Thus we get one hundred and eighty in all.

There is also another way. He reflects as anicca, dukkha, and anattā on the following groups: [Cf. the list in Vis. XX.9] 6 ajjhattika-āyatanāni, 6 bāhira-āytanani, 6 viññānkāyā, 6 phassakāyā, 6 vedanākāyā, 6 saññākāyā, 6 cetanākāyā, 6 tanhākāyā, 6 vitakkā, 6 vicārā. Thus we get one hundred and eighty (3×6×10).

He considers all sankhāras as changing from year to year, month to month, day to day, nay, even from moment to moment. In fact they appear to be new every moment [B. XX. 104: niccanavā], like the continuous flame of a lamp [the constituent particles of which are new every moment].

He also considers them as dukkhā, anattā. By aniccānupassanā his mind is inclined to animittā dhātu, by dukkhānupassanā to appaņihitī dhātu, and by anattānupassanā to suñnatā

N.C.

XX. 9 diff. dhātu. He understands by his discriminating knowledge that every kind of existence such as tayo bhavā, pañca gatiyo, satta viñānatthitiyo, nava sattāvāsā, is fearful and unreal.

Pariccheda-ñāṇam niṭṭhitam.

UDAYABBAYANANAM

The yogāvacara, having discriminated the upādānakkhandhas with these three lakkhaṇas, wishes to cut them off. He takes the nimitta and penetrates to the udaya and vaya.

Upa. gives three kinds of nimitta-gahana:

- (i) Kilesa-nimitta-gahaṇa. This is the perverse view N.C. (vipallāsasaññā) of an ordinary man, that things are permanent when they are not. He is attached to the kilesas. This is like the falling of a moth into a lamp.
- (ii) Samādhi-nimitta-gahaṇa. On one of the thirty-eight nimittas (i.e. kammatthānas¹) he concentrates his mind and thus binds it with the object. This is like the goad applied to an elephant.
- (iii) Vipassanā-nimitta-gahaṇa. If a man, who entertains a belief that things are permanent, sees with insight into each of the five khandhas with their characteristics, he would wish to give them up, like a man who has seized a poisonous serpent. [For this simile compare Vis. XXI. 49-50.]

Upa. goes into details of the way of taking the nimittas and penetrating to the lakkhaṇas. Of the former he gives two ways: ārammaṇato and manasikārato, and of the latter three: hetuto, paccayato, and sa-rasato, in each of the two cases of udaya and vaya.

He penetrates to the udaya and vaya of sankhāras. When he has seen udaya and vaya, he understands four things:

(i) ekalakkhaṇadhamma

- (ii) nānatta-dhamma
- (iii) akiriya-dhamma
- (iv) sammā-dhamma

[From the explanation given of these terms, they appear to correspond to ekattanaya, nānattanaya, abyāpāranaya and evaṃ-dhammatānaya of B.XVII. 309-313; also they appear in XX.102.]

These terms are explained at great length. He perfects his knowledge of the sankhāras and knows that all the sankhāras

1. See Chap. VII. above, p. 38 ff.

XVII. 309-313 XX. 102 are limited, at the beginning by udaya, and at the end by vaya. Thus udayabbaye ñāṇaṃ sankhāra-pariccheda-ñāṇaṃ hoti.

BHANGANUPASSANĀ-NĀŅĀM [Cf. Vis, XXI. 10-28]

The yogāvacara, having seen the udayabbaya-lakkhaṇa, and having thoroughly understood the sankhāras, pays no attention to the udaya, but thinks only of vaya of the mind. Here in this connection, we find the passage, though in an abbreviated form, from Ps. i. 57-58, quoted by B. in XXI. 11.

XX. 76 p.a.

Upa, then proceeds to give the three ways in which he sees the vaya or bhanga. [With this, compare Vis. XX.76, where we have seven divisions, of which the first two are worded in the same way as the first two here, but the explanations agree only in part.] The three ways are:

XX. 78 p.a. XX. 79 r.a.

- (i) Kalāpato. [The second explanation of Upa. agrees with the second explanation of B. given in Vis. XX. 78.]
  - (ii) Yamakato. This roughly agrees with Vis. XX. 79.
  - (iii) Paricchedato. He sees the vaya of many minds.

Thus the yogāvacara sees with his insight all wordly things, even to the smallest speck, as changing, growing, aging and passing out of existence. Further, he sees them as described in the gāthās given by Upa.

XVIII. 32, 33, 36 s.a.

[Here we have a number of gathas, quite a few of which are the same as given by B. at the end of the XVIIIth chapter, in paragraphs 32, 33 and 36. All the stanzas in para 33 are found in substantially the same form-though not in the same order-with only a few variations; as for instance, instead of phassapañcamā, Upa. has rūpagandhādi-pañcadhammā. Similarly, the  $g\bar{a}th\bar{a}$  in paragraph 32 is the same except that the last quarter shows a little variation in words but the meaning appears to be the same. In these stanzas, we meet with the similes of a flash of lightning and a gandhabba-nagara. [See Vis. XX. 104, XXI, 34.] The first stanza of paragraph 36 is also the same except that instead of sakena balena Upa, has sakena kāyena. In the second stanza of the same paragraph, instead of parapaccayato ca jāyare and para-ārammanato. Upa. has respectively na attato jāyare and na attārammaņato.

B. has ascribed these stanzas in paragraphs 32, 33 to the Porāņas, and though it is not so definitely stated about the stanzas in paragraph 36, still presumably they are from the same source.]

The yogāvacara sees the vaya in this way. When he has XX. 105 not yet completely mastered the samādhi, there appear to him the following ten things [which B. calls upakkilesā]: obhāso, ñāṇaṃ, pīti, passddhi, sukhaṃ, adhimokkho, paggaho, upaṭṭhānaṃ, upekkhā, and 出 雜. This is the same list as is given in Vis. XX. 105, except that the last as given by B. is nikanti while this Chinese text gives what would mean nekkhamma or nissarana or patinissagga.

An unintelligent man is distracted by these things but an intelligent man is not disturbed by them. He knows lokiya-dhamma-sankhārārammaṇa as well as lokuttara-dhamma-Nibbā-nārammaṇa. He removes distraction, if there be any, sees only vaya and skilfully and abundantly develops it.

Bhangānupassanā-ñāṇam niţthitam.

CHAPTER XII

PART TWO

[Bk. 12.1.4—12.20.2 (end); Tak. 456c.-461c. Cf. B. XXI. 29 onwards, XXII and XXIII.]

BHAYATUPTTHANANANAM [Cf. Vis. XXI. 2:-34]

The yogāvacara, reflecting upon the vaya or bhanga, becomes afraid of the khandhas and of all kinds of existence, such as the three bhavas, five gatis, seven viññāṇaṭṭhitis and nine sattāvāsas, becomes afraid, as of a frightful man carrying a sword in his hand, or as of a poisonous serpent, or as of a heap of fire. [The last two of these similes occur in Vis. XXI. 29, and, for the first, we have only the word 'ghora' which may stand for this simile of a frightful man.] He is afraid of all nimittas and all kinds of uppāda and thinks of animitta and anuppāda.

MUNCITUKAMYATA-NANAM [Cf. Vis. XXI. 44-46.]

[It should be noted that Upa. does not give any treatment of ādīnavānupassanā-ñāṇa or nibbidānupassanā-ñāṇa, perhaps because, as B. says, these two are the same as bhayatupaṭṭhāna-ñāṇa. See Vis. XXI. 44, where B. quotes as his authority passages from the Porāṇas and Pāli (Ps. ii. 63).]

When the yogāvacara sees all sankhāras as fearful, he naturally wishes to be free from them, like a bird that is surrounded by fire, or like a person that is surrounded by robbers.

Muñcitukamyatā-ñāṇam nìţţhitam.

ANULOMA-NĀNAM

[It should be noted that Upa. at once proceeds to anuloma-ñāṇa, without giving the other intervening ñāṇas, paṭisankhā-nupassanā-ñāṇa and sankhāraupekkhā-ñāṇa, mentioned by B. in the list of eight ñāṇas preceding the saccānulomikañāṇa. See Vis. XXI. 1.]

The yogāvacara, by the cultivation of muñcitukamyatāñāna, wishes to be free from all sankhāras and is inclined towards nibbāna. Ho considers all khandhas as anicca, dukkha and anattā and considers their cessation as nicca, sukha and paramattha.

What is the meaning of anuloma-ñana? Upa. answers: cattaro satipatthana, etc. [All the thirty-seven bodhi-dhammas given in Vis. XXII. 33 are mentioned here.l

Anulomañānam niţţhitam.

COTRABHU-NANAM

Upa. explains the word gotrabhū and his explanation XXII. 5 generally agrees with that of B. XXII. 5. He also gives a quotation from Ps. i. 66, though in an abbreviated form, which corresponds to that given by B. in XXII. 5.

Gotrabhū-ñānam nitthitam.

Immediately after this gotrbhū-ñāna, he has an insight into Suffering, cuts off the Origin of Suffering, experiences its Cessation, and cultivates the Path for the Cessation of Suffering, and the sotapatti-magga-ñana as well as all the Bodhidhammā are produced. At one and the same moment, not before or Similes in after, he makes sacca-pariccheda. To illustrate this simultaneous nature of sacca-pariccheda, Upa. gives three similesthat of a boat crossing the floods, of the lamp that is burning, and of the sun that is shining. [These similes are given by B. in exactly the same words in XXII, 96, 92 and 95 respectively. He ascribes the simile of the lamp definitely to the Poranas,1 while in the case of others though he does not say so, they are clearly from the same source.

XXII. 92, 95, 96

Upa. gives a very fine simile to illustrate the difference between gotrabhū-ñāna and magga-ñāna.2 The former is compared to a man who has put only one foot outside the threshold of the gate of a city which is burning, while the latter is compared to another man who has put both of his feet outside the gate. Just as the former man cannot be said to have properly escaped the burning city so the yogāvacara has not properly escaped the burning city of kilesas, if he has only the gotrabhū-ñāṇa. But when he has the magga-ñāṇa, he has properly escaped the kilesas, like the second man in the above simile. It is this  $magga-\tilde{n}\bar{a}na$  which makes the sacca-paricheda.

The yogāvacara then destroys the three saṃyojanas: sakkāyadiṭṭhi, vicikicchā, and sīlabbata-parāmāsa and attains the sotāpatti-phala.¹ When he has destroyed the sakkāyadiṭṭhi he has destroyed all the sixty-two diṭṭhis. For, sakkāyadiṭṭhi is the chief of all the heresies. Upa. then goes on describing how he gradually proceeds on his path towards Arhatship. His description generally corresponds to that of B. XXII.15-29. Although Upa. is very brief, we often find the same expressions as those of B. For instance, the passage about the five paccavekkhaṇas of the sotāpanna is exactly the same as in B. XXII. 19.

XXII. 15-29

XXII. 19 id.

XXIII. 55

XXIII. 56 diff. Upa. next goes on to tell us about the three kinds of sotapannas: mudidriyo sattakkhattuparamo, majjhimindriyo kolamkolo, and tikkhindriyo ekabījī² [cf. Vis. XXIII. 55]. He has also the same five kinds of anāgāmīs as given by B. in XXIII. 56, but he adds that these five kinds of anāgāmīs are seen in each of the first four classes of Suddhāvāsa gods, namely, Avihas, Atappas, Sudassas, and Sudassīs, while in the last class, namely that of Akaniṭṭha gods, there are only four, because there is no Uddhamsota, as the highest stage has been already reached. From the state of an Anāgāmī he goes to Arhatship. He has destroyed all the kilesas completely, cut off all sankhāras and made an end of all suffering.

N.C.

To show the unknown nature of the destiny of an Arhat, Upa. gives a very appropriate simile. Just as when iron is beaten (red-hot) and dipped into water and cooled, we do not know where the sparks of fire go, so we do not know anything about the destiny of an Arhat when he has reached the Unshakable Happy State.<sup>3</sup>

XXII. 103

Upa. next refers to the views of some teachers who believe in the nānābhisamaya referred to by B. in XXII. 103. B. simply refers to the Kathāratthu for the refutation of their

arguments, but Upa. proceeds to show the flaws in their argument. He points out seven flaws, at least two of which can be identified with some of the refutations of this theory given in the Kathāvatthu, i. 213, para. 5 ff., 216, para. 10. There is one more passage containing the objection raised by an opponent, 'dukkhasaccam cattāri ariya-saccānāti?' [Kv. i.218. para. 14] that can be traced in Upa. Another passage given in answer to the above objection, 'Rūpakkhandhe aniccato diṭṭhe, pañcakkhandhā aniccato diṭṭhā hontā ti?' can also be traced. And in the same way, says Upa., the āyatanas and dhātus. The Kathāvatthu gives them in detail.

PAKINNAKADHAMMA

Upa. continues: Ettha pakinnaka-dhammā veditabbā. He gives the following: vipassanā, vitakka, pīti, vedanā, bhūmi, indriyāni, vimokkho, kilesā, dvi-samādhi-samāpajjanam. Upa. takes them one after another and goes into the detailed treatment of them showing what part they play in the progress of the yogāvacara towards his ideal of Arhatship.

VIPASSANA

Upa. gives two kinds of vipassanā: jhāna-vipassanā and sukkha-vipassanā. If the yogāvacara destroys the nīvaraņas by the power of samādhi, then he cultivates samatha-pubbangama-vipassanā. If, on the contrary, he destroys nīvaraņas by the power of his insight, he cultivates vipassanā-pubbangama-samatha.

VITAKKA

This is explained as sukkha-vipassanā. Upa. shows in what stages on the onward path of the yogāvacara, it is found and in what stages it is not found.

PITI VEDANA The treatment of these together with that of the last corresponds to Vis. XXI. 112-114, but the explanations do not agree in all respects. Upa. also gives here the different aspects of the Path and sa-vitakkabhūmi, avitakka-bhūmi, supputus-bhūmi, nippītika-bhūmi.

BHUMI

Dassana-bhūmi' in the Sotāpatti-magga; or in aniccaditthi. Sankappa-bhūmi in the remaining three Paths and in the four Fruits; or in the reflection and practice of anicca-ditthi. [The first interpretations correspond to XIV. 13.]

Or else,

Sekha-bhūmi in the four maggas and three phalas. Asekha-bhūmi in the Fruit of Arhatship.

INDRIYANI

XVI. 1-10 p.a. Three kinds of lokuttara-indriyas, anaññātaññassāmītindriya, aññindriya, and aññātāvindriya, which respectively appear in the sotāpattimaggañāṇa, in the ñāṇa of the next three Paths as well as of the Fruits of the first, second and third Paths, and in the ñāṇa of the Fruit of Arhatship. [Cf. Vis. XVI. 1, 10 where these indriyas are given.]

VIMOKKHA

Animitta, appanihita, and suññato. These are the three kinds of vimokkhas. Long passages are given to describe these. Only the introductory words of these passages are found in the quotation from Ps. ii. 58, given in Vis. XXI. 70. In the passage from that quotation about the suññato-vimokkha, we have an expression vedabahulo for which Upa. has a word which is the equivalent of nibbidābahulo.

KILESA

XXIII. 49-76 much diff. Upa. gives a long list of 134 kilesas, together with the details as to which of them are enfeebled and destroyed by which of the Four Paths. [Cf. Vis. XXII. 49-76.]

- (i) Tiņi akusalamulāni: lobho, doso, moho.
- (ii) Tisso pariyesanā: kāma-pariyesana, bhava, brahmacariya°3

- 1. See Netti 50: Dassana-bhūmi niyāmavakkantiyā padaṭṭhānam; bhāvanā-bhūmi uttarikānam phalānam pattiyā padaṭṭhānam. Also cf. Pet. VIth Chap. 145 (Bur. ed p. 185): Catasso ariya-bhūmiyo, cattāri sāmañāa-phalāni; tattha yo yathābhūtam pajānāi, esā dassana-bhūmi.
- 2. For these three indrivas also see Pet. Chaps. II and III, pp. 56, 71-72 (Bur. ed. pp. 146, 152).
- 3. The same three are mentioned in Vbh. 366 and Pet. VIIIth Chap. 284 (Bur. ed. 251).

- (iii) Cattāro āsavā: kāmo, bhavo, diṭṭhi, avijjā.
   (iv) Cattāro ganthā: abhijjhā, byāpādo, sīlabbata-parāmāso, idamsaccābhiniveso,
- (v) Cattāro oghā kāmo, bhavo, diṭṭhi, avijjā.
- (vi) Cattāro yogā )
- (vii) Cattāri upādānāni: kāmo, diţţhi, sīlabbatam, attavādo.
- (viii) Catasso agatiyo: chando, doso, bhayam, moho.
- (ix) Pañca maochariyāni: āvāsa-macchariyaṃ, kula°, lābha°, vaṇṇa (色)°,¹ dhamma°.
- (x) Pañca nīvaraṇāni: kāmacchando, byāpādo, thīnamiddhaṃ, uddhacca-kukkuccaṃ, vicikicchā. [It is to be noted here that according to B. XXII.
  71, thīnamiddha and uddhacca are abandoned at the time of Arhatship.² But according to Upa., it is only thīna and uddhacca that are given up at the time of Arhatship and not middha.
  Because he says that middha is rupānuvatti. For Upa.'s position regarding middha, see above
  pp. 48, 95.]
- (xi) Cha vivādamulāni: kodho, makkho, issā, sāṭheyyaṃ, pāpicchatā, sandiṭṭhiparāmāsatā.
- (xii) Satta anusayā (使): Kāmarāgo, paṭigho, māno, diṭṭhi, vicikicchā, bhavarāgo, avijjā.
- (xiii) Attha loka-dhammā: lābho, alābho, ayaso, yaso, pasamsā, nindā, dukkham, sukham.
- (xiv) Nava mānā: Seyyassa 'seyyo 'hamasmī'ti māno, and the remaining eight as given in Vibhanga 389-90.
- (xv) Dasa kilesa-vatthūni: lobho, doso, moho, māno, diṭṭhi, vicikicchā, thīnam, uddhaccam, ahirikam, anot-
- 1. The Chinese text interprets the word vanna as rūpa (£ form) and this is in keeping with the alternative interpretation given in the Commentaries. See DCm. iii. p. 1027: Vanno ti c'ettha sarīravanno pi guṇavaṇno pi veditabbo; DhCm. 375 comments on vanna-macchariya as follows: sarīravaṇṇa-guṇavaṇṇa-maccherena pana pariyattidhamma-maccariyena ca attano va vaṇṇb ti, paresam vaṇṇo 'kim vaṇṇo eso'ti tam tam dosam vadanto pariyattiñ ca kassa ti kiñ ci adento dubbaṇṇo c'eva elamūgo ca hoti.
- 2. See also DCm. iii. p. 1027: Thīnam citta-gelahham; middham khandhattaya-gelahham. Ubhayam pi Arahattamaga-vajjham. Cf. also MCm. ii. 216: middham cetasika-gelahham.

tàppàm. There is also another alternative to these. 'That man has done a great harm to me, or is doing, or will do.' The same three cases with a man whom one likes or dislikes. These nine with the addition of the tenth, the thought of doing harm, make up the number ten.

- (xvi) Dasa akusala-kammapatha: pāṇātipāto, adinnādānaṃ, [kāmesu] micchācāro, musāvādo, pisuṇā vācā [the Chinese Text has a word which means 'double tongued'], pharusā vācā [the Chinese text would strictly mean pāpikā vācā], samphappalāpo, abhijhā, byāpādo, micchā ditthi.
- (xvii) Dasa samyojanāni (十 使): These are the same as seven above anusayas mentioned (in the xiith category) with the addition of sīlabbataparāmāsa, issā and macchariya. [This list differs from the usual list of the ten samyojanas, which gives rūpa-rāga, arūpa-rāga uddhacca in the place of bhava-raga, issā, and macchariya of this list. [See Abhs. p. 32, Chap. VII. para 2.
- (xviii) Dasa micchantā: the same as micchattā of B. XXII. 50, 66.
  - (xix) Dvādasa vipallāsā: the same as mentioned in B. XXII. 53, 68.
  - (xx) Dvādasa akusala-cittuppādā: the same as mentioned in B. XXII. 63, 76.

Thus we have a list of 134 kilesas. Upa., unlike B., describes in several cases at which of the Paths these kilesas are enfeebled before they are finally destroyed. Even as regards the stage of their complete destruction, Upa. often differs from B.

1. For the first time where the enumeration of the categories of the kilesas is given (12.13.3), the character used is 結 although here where the detailed constituents are given the character used is 使. It appears, therefore, that both the characters are indiscriminately used, although we have seen above that the latter character is used for anusaya. In Przyluski 'Le Conceile de Rājagṛha (first part), p. 46, we find 使 used for anusaya, while 結 使 is used for samyojana. For the very slight distinction between these two words, see MCm. iii. 145: so yeva kileso bandhanaṭṭhena saṃyojanaṃ, appahīnaṭṭhena anusayo.

DVE SAMAPATTIYO:

- (A) Aputhujjanasevitā phala-samāpatti.
- (B) Saññavedayita-nirodha-samapatti.

With reference to the first (A), Upa. raises the following questions and answers them:

- (i) What is phala-samāpatti? It is a sāmaññaphala with the mind (citta) placed on Nibbana: [cf. B. XXIII. 6: ariyaphalassa nirodhe appanā. This is called phalasamāpatti.
- (ii) Why is it called phalasamāpatti? It is neither kusala, akusala, nor kiriyā.1 It is achieved as the lokuttara-maggaphala-vipāka and so it is thus called.
- (iii) Who attain it? The Arhats and the Anagamis, because the samādhi reaches perfection in their case (於此定作 滿). Also there are some who say on the authority of the Abhidhamma that all the Ariyas attain it. Upa. here quotes, as their authority, a passage which agrees with the passage from Ps. i. 68: Sotāpattimagga-patilābhatthāya uppādam abhibhuyyatī ti gotrabhū, Sotāpattiphala-samāpattatthāya uppādam abhibhuyyatī ti gotrabhū. Evam sabbattha. [B. gives the same passage, in a fuller form, in Vis. XXIII. 7].

The same view as that of B. in XXIII. 7. is referred to by Upa.

[B. refers exactly to this view that is held by Upa. when he says: keci pana 'sotāpanna-sakadāgamino pi na samāpajjanti, uparimā dve yeva samāpajjantī' ti vadanti. Idan ca tesam kāranam: Ete hi samādhismim paripūrakārino ti. B. refutes this view by saying that even a puthujjana can attain that state [of perfection] in a lokiya-samādhi attained by him, and by further adducing the passage from Ps. i. 68 [given above in brief] in support of his position. It is evident from this that Upa. was aware of this view and the argument on which it was based.

Upa. next refers to another view according to which all N.C. Ariyas may have it but only those in whom samādhi has reached perfection can attain it. To support this view, Upa.

- 1. Cf. a similar statement about the dhutas or dhutangas on pp. 23, 24 above. The Taisho edition gives a different punctuation and so it gives a slightly different interpretation.
  - 2. Upa here refers to the view held by the school of Buddhaghosa.

quotes one Ayasmā Nārada¹ (Nā-lo-tho 那 麗 乾) who says to mendicants "Just as in a mountain-forest there may be a well but no rope with the help of which water may be taken out. If at that time there comes a man overcome by the heat of the sun and fatigued by thirst, and if he sees the well and knows that there is water in it, but still cannot actually reach it,² then merely by his knowledge about the existence of water in the well and by seeing it, he cannot satisfy his thirst; so in the same way, if I know nirodha as nibbāna and even if I have a perfect yathābhūta-ñānadassana, I do not thereby become a khīnāsava Arahā."

XXIII. 8

- (iv) Why is it attained? The answer is the same as B.'s: ditthadhmmasukhavihārattham [B. XXIII. 8]. Upa. gives a quotation in which the Blessed One is described as saying to Ananda that he finds his body in a phāsuvihāra when he attains animitta-cetosamādhi.
- (v) In what way does he attain it? The answer substantially agrees with that given in B. XXIII. 10.

XXIII. 9, 12, 13

- (vi) In what way does he reflect (kathaṃ ca manasi karoti?)
  Asankhatam amatadhātum santato manasikaroti.
- (vii) In what way does he attain it, stay in it, and emerge from it? The answer is the same in substance—although the words used are different—of what is said in quotations from M. i. 296-97, given by B. in XXIII. 9, 12, 13.
- (viii) Is this samādhi lokiya or lokuttara? This samāpatti is lokuttara and not lokiya.

Upa. then goes into a brief discussion of a technical point. When the Anāgāmī reflects upon the phalasamāpatti, why is it that the gotrabhū does not produce, without any intervening obstruction, the Arahattamagga? The answer is: because it does not produce vipassanā-dassana, as it is not the thing aimed at; and because it is not strong enough.

- 1. Who is this Nārada? Mhvy. 3470 mentions one Nārada-bhikkhu under 'Maharṣi-ṇāmāni'. A.iii.57-62 mentions one Nārada-bhikkhu, who is shown to be consoling King Muṇḍa on the death of his wife Bhaddā. Petavatthu refers to one in pp. 4,2,44. Also see Petavatthu-Commentary 2,15,208,210,211, etc; Vimānavatthu-Commentary 165-169, 203; DhpCm. I.42,84,344.
- 2. Cf. Peţ. 190 (Bur. ed. 206): yathā gambhīre udapāne udakam cakkhunā passati, na ca kāyena abhisambhuņāti, evamassa ariyā nijjhānakkhantiyā ditţ'ı bhavati, na ca sacchikatā.

[This is the answer of Upa. to the objection raised by B. in XXIII. 11, to the view of some: Ye<sup>1</sup> pana vadanti: sotāpanno phalasamāpattim samāpajjissāmā ti vipassanam paṭṭhapetvā sakadāgamā hoti, sakadāgāmi ca anāgamā ti, te vattabbā: evam sati anāgāmā arahā bhavissati, arahā paccekabuddho, paccekabuddho ca buddho. Upa. seems to have anticipated this objection raised, perhaps along will others, by the school B.]

Then he speaks of duvidha phala-visesa, which seems to be diff. quite different from B.'s dvīhi ākārehi rasānubhavanam hoti [B. XXIII. 3].

Upa. next proceeds to the treatment of (B) saññā-vedayita-nirodha-samāpatti, which very closely resembles that given by B. in XXIII. 17-51.

XXIII. 17-51 8.8.

- (i) What is saññā-vedayita-nirodha-samāpatti? Citta-cetasikānam appavatti. [See B. XXIII 18].
- (ii) Who attain it? The Anagamis and the Arhats. In them, the samādhi reaches perfection. Upa. says that the Sotāpannas, Sakadāgāmis and those beings who are in the arūpāvacara-loka cannot attain this samāpatti. Upa. also gives reasons.
- (iii) Being endowed with what powers can one attain it? The powers of samatha and vipassanā. The treatment of them is the same as in Vis. XXIII. 19-23.
- (iv) By the cessation of what sankhāras is it attained? The answer is the same as is contained in that part of the quotation from Ps. i. 97-100, which is given by B. in XXIII. 24.
- (v) What are the preliminaries (pubba-kiccāni)? They are the same four as given by B. in XXIII. 34, except that for Satthupakkosanam we have 不 亂 which means avikkhepa.
- (vi) Why is it attained? Ditthadhammasukhavihārattham. For, it is added: ayam ariyānam sabbapacchimā āneñjasamādhi. And further to produce abhiññās one enters upon vipphāra-samādhi, as āyasmā Sanjīva did to protect his body. As also Sāriputta² and 白鷺子底沙 (Moggali-putta-tissa(?))³
- 1. Dhammapāla (ii. p. 896) here again tells us that B. makes this statement with reference to Abhayagirīvādins.
- 2. See Ps.ii.212. The stories given in M.i.333 and Ud. 39-40 are briefly narrated in B.XII.32 and 31 respectively.
  - 3. Tissa, the son of a white bird (Moggala).

- did. [Cf. B. XXIII. 37, where only the first two of these names are given but in a different context. The last name is not there.]
- (vii) How is it attained? The answer is the same as is given in Vis. XXIII. 31-34, 43-47, except that according to B. there are not more than two nevasaññā-nāsaññā-cittas, while according to Upa, there may be two or three.
- (viii) How does he emerge from it? He does not think 'I shall emerge from the samādhi' but when the time-limit that is previously determined is reached, he emerges from it,'
- (ix) With what kind of citta does he emerge from it? An Anāgāmī with anāgāmī-citta and an Arhat with arahatta-citta. [Cf. B. XXIII. 49.]
- (x) How many contacts has he? Three contacts, contact with suññatā, animitta, and appanihita.
- (xi) What Sankhāras first arise? First kāyasankhāras and then vacī-sankhāras.
- (xii) What is the difference between a dead person and one who has attained this samādhi? The answer is the same as given by B. in Vis. XXIII. 51, in the quotation from M. i. 296.
- (xiii) Is this samādhi sankhata or asankhata? It cannot be said of this samādhi that it is sankhata or asankhata. There is no sankhatadhamma in this samādhi, and one cannot know when asankhatadhamma comes and goes. [Cf. Vis. XXIII. 52.]

Nirodhajjhāna-samāpatti niţthitā.

At the end of this chapter is given the  $udd\bar{a}na$  of the twelve chapters in the book.

Then there is a concluding  $g\bar{a}th\bar{a}$ , which purports to say:

'Who can know this Dhamma which is profound, un-namable, unthinkable? Only that yogāvacara who resolves upon cultivating the excellent Path, who has no doubt in the instructions and who has no ignorance.'

I propose to indicate here some of the parallel passages found in the Vimuttimagga and Peṭakopadesa.¹

- (1) In the very Introductory chapter<sup>2</sup> of the Vimuttimagga, Upatissa gives his reasons as to why he should tell the people the Path of Deliverance. There are, he says, some people who profit by listening to others and he gives a quotation (see M., i, 294) in which the Blessed One declares that there are two ways in which one can have the right view (sammādiṭṭhi)—either by learning it from others or by self-reflection. This corresponds to 'Dre hetū dre paccayā sāvakassa sammādiṭṭhiyā uppādāya, parato ca ghoso saccānusandhi, ajjhattañ ca yoniso manasikāro' found at the very beginning of the Peṭakopadesa.
- (2) In the third chapter of (III.74) of the Visuddhimagga, Buddhaghosa refers to the view of the fourteen cariyās which he is not prepared to accept. Upatissa does refer to these fourteen<sup>3</sup> and names them one after another. Among these there are two types which are called by the name of samabhāgacariyā. Now exactly this very type is found in Petakopadesa, VIIth Chapter, pp. 157, 162 (pp. 190, 192 of the printed edition).
- (3) In the Twelfth book of the Vimuttimagga, in the twelfth chapter (Saccapariccheda), part two, we have only three lokuttara-indriyas given as playing an important part of the progress of the Yogāvacara towards the ideal of Arhatship. These same three indriyas, aññātaññassāmītindriyam, aññindriyam, and ññātāvindriyam are also found in the second and the third chapters of the Peṭakopadesa, pp. 56, 71-72 (pp. 146, 152 of the printed edition).
- (4) So also in the same chapter we come across three<sup>5</sup> kinds of searches, tisso esanā or pariyesanā. The same three we meet with in the eighth chapter of the Petakopadesa, p. 284 (p. 251 of the printed edition). Also see Vibhanga, p. 366.
- (5) In the second part of the XIth chapter we have three-fold classification of things; khandha-sangaha, āyatana-sangaha, dhātusangaha. Exactly the same classification we meet with in the sixth chapter of the Petakopadesa, p. 124 (p. 176 of the printed edition).
  - (6) In Book four, Chapter eight, part one, of the Vimutti-magga, Upatissa mentions three kinds of middha, āhāraja, utuja and cittaja, of which only the last he considers as nīvaraņa, while the other two are possible even in an Arhat. Upatissa speaks of it in the twelfth chapter also. There he says that among things given up by one at the time of the Arhatship, there are thina and uddhacca and not thina-middha and uddhacca as is asserted by Buddhaghosa in the XXII Chapter 71 para of the Visuddhimagga. This view of Upatissa is supported in the Petakopadesa, VIIth Chapter, p. 180 (p. 201 of the printed edition), where it is said 'Atthi pana Arahato kāyakilesamiddhañ ca okkamati, na ca tam nīvaranam; tassa thinamiddham nivaranam ti na ekamsena'. This view is also supported by the author of the Milindapanha (see p. 253 of Trenckner's edition) who mentions middha among ten things over which an Arhat has no control.

- (7) Upatissa quotes from what he calls San Tsan three passages of which I have been so far able to identify two passages only in the Petakopadesa, VIIth Chapter, pp. 157. 158 (p. 191 of the printed edition). One of these passages (p. 46) corresponds to 'Tattha alobhassa pāripūriyā vivitto hoti kāmehi, tattha adosassa pāripūriyā, amohassa pāripūriyā ca vivitto hoti pāpakehi akusalchi dhammehi'.
- (8) The other passage<sup>2</sup> contains a simile which illustrates the distinction between vitakka and vicāra. The simile in the Vimuttimagga corresponds to the following passage from the Petakopadesa 'Tattha pathamābhinipāto vitakko, patiladdhassa vicaranam vicāro. Yathā puriso dūrato purisam passati āgacchantam, na ca tāva jānāti itthī ti vā puriso ti vā, yadā tu patilabhati itthī ti vā puriso ti va evam-vanno ti vā—evam vicāro vitakke appeti.'
- (9) There are other similes also from the Vimuttimagga which can be traced to the Petakopadesa. VIIth Chapter, p. 158 (p. 191 of the printed edition). Here is one.3 'Yathā baliko humhiko* sajjhāyam karoti evam vitakko, yathā tam yeva anupassati evam vicāro...........Niruttipaţisambhidāyam ca paţibhānapatisambhidāyam ca vitakko, dhammapatisambhidāyam ca atthapaţisambhidāyam ca vicāro.'
- (10) While describing the simultaneous nature of the penetration into Truths (saccaparictheda) Upatissa gives three similes,5 that of a boat crossing the floods, that of a lamp that is burning and that of the sun that is shining. Peṭakopadesa gives almost identical similes (p. 150; 187 of the printed edition). Buddhaghosa refers one of these similes to Porāṇas and although he does not mention that name with regard to others, it is very clear that the other similes also he borrows from the same source.

- (11) There is one other important simile which I have been able to trace to the Petakopadesa, p. 190 (p. 206 of the printed edition). Upatissa gives a quotation1 from one Nārada which purports to say 'Just as in a mountain-forest there may be a well but no rope with which water could be taken out. If at that time there comes a man overcome by the heat of the sun and fatigued by thirst, who sees the well and knows that there is water in it, but still cannot actually reach it, then merely by his knowledge about the existence of water in the well and merely by seeing it, he cannot satisfy his thirst; so in the same way, if I know nirodha as nibbana and even if I have a perfect yathābhūtañānadassana. I do not thereby become a khināsava arahā.' The passage in the Petakopadesa says 'Yathā gambhīre udapāne udakam cakkhunā passati na ca kāyena abhisambhuņāti, nijjhānakhantiyā ditthibhavatievamassa  $ariy\bar{a}$ sacchikatā'.
- (12) Besides the passages given above there are some minor passages where we find some of the jhānas explained as having particular angas. For instance, the third trance<sup>2</sup> is explained as having five angas in the Vimuttimagga. These same angas are mentioned in the Petakopadesa, p. 155 (p. 190 of the printed edition). 'Tathā pañcanga-samannāgatam tatiyam jhānam—satiyā, sampajaññena, sukhena, cittekaggatāya, upekkhāya'.

Do the instances given above justify us in concluding that the Author of the Vimuttimagga had the advantage of consulting the Peṭakopadesa<sup>3</sup>?
